Thought He Was a Bad Man.

It had been said, "You have a very bad man associated with you." He thought it was a sign of weakness for aldermen to stand up and say that because E. A. Macdonald was connected with the company they would have nothing to do with it, however good the scheme might be for the city. Referring to the charge that stock in the company had been given away, he as a member of the board of directors emphatically denied the statement.

Alluding to the temporary stock certificate for $10,000, printed in The World yesterday morning, Mr. Hughes said it bore a date prior to the organization of the company, but he dared say that the man who signed it had a good reason for doing so. He was not a director of the company and he never had here, but of ear as he could understand to the chief over their knees. As the was morn difficulty, encumbered by such heavy clothing.

The great success of Dineens' opening sale of furs might puzzle any one who was unacquainted with the firm's methods. A large part of their prosperity must be asserted with The Times and the heads of the detectives.

The names of the stockholders was a purely private matter, and he was astonished that the company's solicitors should have been humiliated in the way that they were by the Executive Committee. When E. A. Macdonald advanced to the front of the platform, wearing a pleasant smile, he was greeted with an outburst of applause. At the very outset the "trusted agent" fired a shot at The World. "There is a repeated challenge," said he, "in a so-called local lenge," said he, "in a so-called local newspaper for an explanation on my newspaper for an explanation on my newspaper for an explanation of the should be sent and sensational Novel Graphically Hustrated, By Jules Vernes.

I want to tell the audience that the explanation is not owing because it is a matter of purely private concern. I owe the explanation to myself, because there has been an inuendo and an improper use made of a purely private business. This company, this Georgian Bay Ship Canal and Power Aqueduct Company, has never issued—I have knowledge of this—one dollar of stock, the company has not issued a bond of any kind, except for value received, and,

"I believed that Toronto would embrace the offer with open arms, but I found to my regret that what I thought would take six weeks has taken two years to accomplish. I am happy to say it is just about accomplished. (Applause.) To secure myself in the promise I made a stipulation that a certain number of my friends in Toronto should be directors of the company with them. This was agreed to. I came to Toronto; I approached many mer but I found that nearly every wealthy man in Toronto was, an owner of gas or electric or railway stock or connected with some ad-

I said to these gentlemen, if you will co-operate with me in forming this company and assist it I will give you so and so out of my own own share of the transaction." the fusilades of the press, and betrayed his trust. The certificate which he has, from a legal standpoint, is valueless, because the company was never incorporated under that name, and the company that is now organized has nothing whatever to do with it. I feel myself morally responsible to hand over all I promised to him, provided he keeps his part of the compact. Now you understand as much as I do of the matter."

The trusted agent concluded his remarks with a promise to answer any pertinent questions that might be put to him, but none of the audience availed themselves of the offer.

A yery noticeable fact is. that Lialy does not participate in the alliance in spite of the cifor to Signor Crispi's diplomacy. cover.

At the time of the accident there were as far as known seven men around the boiler house. Nobody seems to be able to give a correct statement as to the cause of the explosions.

The Explosions.

Without a moment's warning the last boiler on the west side of the nest went up, and it was followed by the others in rapid succession. The workmen were knocked in every direction, and what had been but a few minutes before a strong corrugated iron building disappeared as if by magic, and all that remained was a tumbling mass of brick and timbers, besides numerous pieces of twisted pipe and battered boiler iron.

The nine remaining boilers were so inquired that they will never be used. Pieces of heavy steel were carried hundreds of yards, while half a boiler was found oven a quarter of a mile up the mountain. The terrific report was heard for miles, and it was scarcely a minute before many of the employes of the cold liery were upon the scene of devastation, and at once set to work to liberate the men under the debris.

Carr, Boyle and Eslick were dead when found in the debris, and McLaughlin and Dediam died soon after being removed to their homes. Fireman Dichanstin is internally hurt, besides having several fractured bones, and it is feared he cannot recover. Peter Heck was knocked senseless by flying brick, his scalp is badsly toyn and he is severely bruised. The Explosions.
