TWO STORIES WITH A MORAL

A man who has been making high class violins in Chicago for the past quarter century could get suitable wood only in Germany. Regularly he made his trips over the Atlantic, and made his purchases. Last year he got a bit curious as to the origin of his timber, and when he got through tracing it to its source he found this:—It was grown in the United States, shipped to Germany and then shipped back to his warehouse in Chicago. The violin man is making no more trips to Germany.

A news paragraph has recently gone the rounds of the press in Eastern Ontario to the effect that a certain ambitious town had secured a band leader, a musician who had seen service with a military regiment in England. The object of the announcement was probably to give the impression that by reason of his connection in the old country he was a member of his profession far in advance of a mere Canadian trained in the place of his nativity.

It seems, however, that the band leader in question was after all a Canadian. He was born and raised in a small village near Toronto and in that village received all the musical training and band experience that he could boast of. He had certainly never been leader of a band until he received a call to the town where he is now located.

There is a point to these tales. They do not indicate anything new or modern in the human mind. "Far fields are aye green," runs the Scotch proverb. "Lo! the brave music of the distant drum," sang Omar, a couple of centuries earlier than the discovery of this continent.

Canadian literature, Canadian art,

Canadian music, Canadian industry—none of these will ever reach full stature until we learn to appreciate the Canadian product at its full value, until we learn that the mere fact of a foreign label does not mean a superiority over what is offered here in Canada.

ARKONA

The streets of the village are being greatly improved upon this week. The grading adding much to the condition and appearance.

The Arkona Dairy Co., Limited, opened their factory on May 8th. The cheese making will be the principal part this season. Mr. F. C. Eastman, the manager, has his staff engaged for the summer.

Miss Jean McPherson of Forest is visiting with her sister, Mrs. V. C. Hundley.

Mr. Ed. Smith returned to Harbor Beach, Mich., where he has secured a position for the summer.

The Memorial supper put on by the Women's Institute was a success and some fifty dollars was realized.

Mr. John F. Dickson was in Toronto last week on business.

Shoup of Thedford, being the speaker. Special choir of mothers will give the music and ladies will usher etc. A special collection for the W. M. S. is asked for. Everybody welcome.
