

Canadian policy often result in certain restrictions which the United States cannot accept as having important cultural consequences. It is these different views that are taken to international negotiations on trade and investment.