NOVELTY LINGERIE FOR SUNNY DAYS

The New Double Petticoat in Embroidery or Fine Lace.

SECURING THE FLARE

By Means of Full Flounces, Reeding and Extra Ruffles.

There is a solution to the petticoat problem in a lovely new double-skirted model which will simply captivate fair femininity.

To make the flaring midsummer frock "flare" is even a greater proposition to handle than was that of the spring costume, for now that soft white fabrics are being used, the flaring effect of the skirt will not suffice. Nothing but the sheerest of exquisite tawns, silk crepes and laces or embroideries may be used under the frock of dainty lingerie and lace.

The new silhouette demands a smooth fitting hip line, and then great big flare with yards and yards of material in the lower skirt section. To secure the desired effect, a very smart petticoat has been designed, with a full under section, topped with another petticoat applied to the deep yoke portion.

For general wear the under section and well-fitted yoke may be fashioned of lawn or very fine muslin with the overskirt in a pretty embroidery. The underskirt is supplied with a neat little dust frill, which holds the petticoat out splendidly—and the flare is no longer a hoped-for dream.

For more elaborate wear, are beautiful models in exquisite lace, finest of nets and any amount of tiny French roses, ribbon roses and velvet bows. Seeding is made use of in these—run into the flounces of lace a few inches below the knees—resulting in a very quaint and novel effect, closely resembling the one-time favored crinoline. Very diminutive French flowers, in softest tones of pink, blue and green, with pearl centres, and little silk stems, which form a dainty chain along the reed casing.

A grocery shower for the Carmelite Sisters will be given at their orphanage, 50 Ossington avenue, on Saturday, June 26, from 2 to 3 p.m. All interested are cordially invited to attend.

CANADIAN SOLDIER SAW GERMAN BARBARITIES

Pte. Cockburn Talked With Those Who Found Crucified Man.

Pte. R. C. Cockburn returned to his home in Toronto at 87 Strathcona avenue yesterday afternoon, with the sight of one eye lost, a bullet wound in the leg and his instep shattered by a shrapnel shell, all sustained in the battle of St. Julien.

Pte. Cockburn was in a trench that was struck by a shell and was buried in the earth for half an hour. He saw two little boys with their hands off and a small girl with her ears off, while the mother had been wounded with German bayonets. He also talked with the men who took the crucified Canadian off the cross and said these men believed the soldier had been crucified while alive, because the wounds had bled.

Major Marshall and Sergt. Jersey Baldwin certainly deserve the V.C., said Cockburn. "I know that Baldwin took four wounded men out of the trenches towards a dressing station."

Harold, the older brother, was wounded at Festubert, but has now recovered.
