Liberalism, says Mr. Chamberlain

has made it as difficult as possible for President Kruger to give way, and that "but for his violent and menacing language, the dispute with the South African Republic would be in a fair way of peaceful settlement." There has never been any doubt as to Mr. Chamberlain's sentiments and aims. At the bottom of the whole business, as we know too well, are Mr. Cecil Rhodes and the set of capitalists of which he is the chief, and who, if the Transvaal were conquered, would control the Johannesburg mines. The Johannesburg mines may be a tempting object, but they are not identical with British supremacy in South Africa, much less with Anglo-Saxon civilization. Let us still hope that the spirit of Lord Salisbury will prevail over that of Mr. Chamberlain in this, as it has in other international questions, and that the end will be peace with justice. It would seem that somebody in this country is very busy in selling the moral support of Canada on the side of Mr. Cecil Rhodes.

The Demos in Transvaal

is a popular belief that the Transvaal is a land of peace and justice, and that the people of the Transvaal are breaking in with their own hands the chains of British imperialism.
