transport. After this process goes on for some time the German line may be expected to break.

A fierce engagement continues north of Verdun on the Thiaumont Fleury line. The French surged forward yesterday after they had evacuated Fleury Village, restormed the greater portion of it and retook for the second time in 24 hours the Thiaumont work, and made more than 400 unwounded prisoners. At nightfall they still retained the Thiaumont work and the greater part of Fleury. The battle was furious to the northwest and south of the Thiaumont work and all attempts of the Germans failed to dislodge the French from the territory occupied by them in their advance. Energetic resistance is still being made by the enemy to the French onsets. Several bombardments in the region of Verdun were carried out by French aeroplanes. These dropped 32 bombs on the Stenay station, 84 on the Montmedy station and many others on bivouacs in the Domvillers region.

At Pozieres the British troops, by capturing trenches to the north of the town, have come in close touch with the enemy. Around these positions lie a great many German dead. One hundred prisoners fell into our hands. The Germans, being nervous, threw a curtain of fire southward of Pozieres nearly all day, and they shelled the southern portion of the Mametz wood. In detonating mines the enemy damaged his own wire with one at St. Eloi and exploded another near Auchy on his own side of the crater. "This," says Sir Douglas Haig, "seems to indicate some nervousness among the enemy's miners."

British aeroplanes retain the supremacy of the clouds as a result of an engagement between four British and seven German machines. In a 45 minutes' action the Germans had three of their craft driven down. Two of the British machines failed to return.

Altho the enemy retired to new and shorter lines to defend Kovel and Lemberg in the eastern theatre of the war only the other day, the Russian pressure against him has already begun to bring results again for the Russians have crossed the Stokhod River on two fronts, captured fortified heights on the western bank northeast of Lemberg, advanced from that stream to the Stavok, a western tributary, and won and evacuated a village 19 miles from Kovel, and they have also launched a furious attack on the Austrians south of Brody on the Sereth-Graberki line, taking already 1300 prisoners. It is said that the Germans, under the direct command of Von Hindenburg, are resisting desperately. Von Hindenburg will do all in his power to make his men fight till the last, for he is one of the German generals fighting with a halter around his neck for his atrocities to Russian prisoners. It is the object of the allies to have all these criminals tried for their offences against humanity after the war.

Regardless of pledges to Washington, Germany, which has been surreptitiously carrying on submarine sniping of innocent traders and fishing boats, has resumed her submarine warfare with great vigor and has sunk about a score of ships in a day or two. Since Roosevelt has not been nominated for president, it is probable that Washington will remain inactive this time. It will have to be a desperate and atrocious deed to bring forth another White House note.

Since the Dantschland has passed out to sea with her cargo of nickel and rubber for Germany it may be remarked that as she was of a type vessel hitherto employed as a warship and also of a type which would never be employed for commercial purposes in time of peace, it was certainly a stretch of neutrality for Washington to recognize her as a merchantman. Moreover, as a ship built especially to avoid visit and search, it is within the legal province of the British navy to sink her on sight and to ask and answer no questions about her.

Sight and to ask and answer no questions about her.

COURT INTERVENES

Defence and Crown Counsel Show Sharp Divergence of Views.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 4.—There were w moments of tension in the trial grounds on Wednesday. R. A. Bonnar, K.C., chief counsel for A. Spencer, Caledonia Mines, N.S.: 447975, George C. Almost Start Fighting.

Mr. Burbidge stepped to the crown's side of the table, where Mr. Bonnar was sitting, and took the senior crown counsel by the shoulder. Mr. Bonnar stood up, a stalwart officer hurried in their direction as the two lawyers faced one another. Then Justice Prendergast applied soothing words. He said the present case was one in which the defence should be allowed the fullest latitude in cross-examining witnesses, and he added that he was sure nesses, and he added that he was sure an expression of regret would be forthcoming from Mr. Bonnar. Mr. Bonnar replied that the statement of Mr. Burbidge was to the effect that he (Bonnar) was not telling the truth. Sured His lordship declared the incident It i

Also Earlier Incident.

A little earlier Mr. Andrews and R. M. Craig of the crown counsel, participated in a somewhat similar incident. Mr. Andrews devoted a lot of time in seeking to have V. W. Horwood, under cross examination, do a little arithmetic to ascertain the yardage cost of concrete. Horwood refused, saying he could not make the division accurately in court. Mr. Craig remarked that he would not like to do it himself in court. Mr. Andrews declared that "this man is ready to come along and tell any sort of a disgraceful lie to help out the witness." Are you talking to me? Then you are no gentleman, "retorted Mr. Craig." Well, you are not," said Mr. Andrews, and he proceeded with his cross-examination.

It was the 11th day of the trial, and the stand. Horwood, at the opening of the session apologized to J. P. Foley a member of the legislature of duced his name by mistake.

The defense lawyers, that he was a liar.

A dispute arose when the defense tried to put in a letter from Auditor Fearnley to C. H. Dancer. The crown objected that the document was a copy and the judge ruled that when an original was available a copy could not be used. A. J.
