

ANNOUNCEMENT.

IN issuing to the Profession and public the announcement of the Twentieth Winter Session of the Toronto School of Medicine, the Faculty have much pleasure in congratulating the friends of the Institution on its continued prosperity—a prosperity indicated not only by a large increase of pupils annually, but by the more general existence among them of those higher preliminary qualifications so very desirable in gentlemen entering upon the study of medicine.

After the close of the last Lecture Season, Dr. Barrett—who for the past ten years had proved himself both a popular lecturer and successful teacher—found that engagements altogether outside of the School necessitated his resignation of the Chair of Institutes of Medicine—a step regretted alike by himself, his colleagues, and the pupils.

As a tribute of respect to his personal worth and scientific attainments, as well as a mark of continued esteem, the Corporation have elected him to the honorary position of Emeritus Lecturer on the Institutes of Medicine.

As future incumbent of the Chair thus vacant, the Corporation has had the good fortune to secure the services of James Bovell, M.D., and L.R.C.P., Eng., a gentleman of more than Provincial reputation, who has devoted many years of studious observation to microscopical anatomy and its important bearings, and is already well known as a favourite teacher in this department.

Lectures will commence on Wednesday the 1st of October next. They will be delivered in the Medical School Building of the Toronto University, situated in University Park.

Students of the Toronto School of Medicine will thus be enabled, from their proximity, to avail themselves of the advantages afforded by the University Library and Museum.

During the past year the Corporation, at great expense, procured an extensive and valuable assortment of anatomical and pathological models and preparations made in Paris. These, together with the previously existing Museum, and which is yearly increasing in value
