CANCEL LICENSES OF 7 MILKMEN

Board of Health Action at a Meeting Yesterday — Free Vaccination Before School Resumes.

At the monthly meeting of the sub-district board of health held yesterday afternoon reports were received from various officers and routine business transacted. Seven milk producers' licenses to sell milk in this health district were cancelled on account of the condition of the milk.

John Kelly, chairman of the local board was in the chair. Other members present were Mrs. R. J. Hooper, Dr. William Warwick, George Blake, and T. M. Burns, secretary.

It was reported that during July fifty-four deaths had occurred in the city. There were reports of six cases of diphtheria, nine cases of typhoid, one case of chickenpox and five cases of tuberculosis. Dr. F. Fred Johnston, food and dairy inspector, submitted a report for July covering inspection of slaughter houses as well as his regular work. Miss Brophy, tuberculosis nurse, also reported.

Dr. H. L. Abramson made a report covering the tests of water made at various times.

Free vaccination for school children was ordered to be begun on August 18, and continue until school opens. Vaccinating will be done only in the afternoon. The L. board also allowed the opening of a house in the south end which had been closed because it was deemed unfit for human habitation. Satisfactory repairs were effected. Copies of reports on the examination of city water were ordered forwarded to the mayor and the commissioners of water and sewerage. The board ordered the purchase of two additional milk sediment testers.

SAYS MAN TOOK CHILD TO SEEK BIGGER BERRIES

Ethel Levine's Story of Missing Sadie McAuley.

Search for Child Fruitless, Though Vicinity of Douglas Avenue Combed by Detectives and Others—Quest Kept Up.

Up to noon today there was no trace of nine-year-old Sadie McAuley, who disappeared on Tuesday at noon while picking berries on a hill in the rear of Douglas avenue. A Times reporter called at the home of Ethel Levine, 93 Clarence street, this morning and was told the following story.

A little before noon on Tuesday she started off for Douglas avenue with her father's dinner. She asked Sadie to accompany her saying that they could pick some berries before returning home. Taking two bottles with them to hold the berries they started off and after delivering her father's dinner, they went through a yard near Bentley street and down to the hill facing Marble Cove. While doing so she said a young man approached and after helping them pick some berries told them he knew where there were many more much larger. She said that Sadie went with him, but she refused and told Sadie not to go.

She said they went towards a fence farther down the hill and the young man assisted Sadie over it and then they walked down the road and out of sight. She said she picked a few more berries herself and calling out for Sadie, returned home.

Asked to describe the young man as well as she could, she said he was wearing Khaki pants, a brown coat and a peaked cap. She said they had not been playing any games, but were only picking berries a few minutes when the man approached. Despite numerous questions asked she did not change her account of the incident.

Mrs. McAuley said she is practically a stranger in the city and had no idea who Douglas avenue was far away, or she would never have allowed her little daughter to go. She said the child is delicate and slightly crippled as a result of hip disease, but a bright and clever girl for her age. The mother is nearly frantic, and as her husband is working in Charlottetown has no one to fall back on for advice. Her son and daughter have searched the hill and vicinity and have so far failed to find any trace of their sister.

Sergeant Detective Power said this morning that the story told by Ethel Levine was the same as she told him yesterday. He was then in the way to the house further to question the little girl in hopes of finding out something which would give him a clue. He said he and his staff diligently searched the woods and ground in that vicinity yesterday and were assisted by about twenty boys, but they could not find a trace of the missing child. He said he would endeavor to get some boy scouts and other familiar with the district and make an effort to find the little girl this afternoon.

The hill in question runs from Clarendon street to the Suspension bridge and slopes down to Marble Cove on the northern section and farther south towards the falls. The water in Marble Cove this side of the road leading down to Murray & Gregory's mill is shallow and it is declared would be impossible for the child to be drowned there unless she waded out a considerable distance.
