The Tuft of Hair

A beautiful woman found dead in the gray morning on the outskirts of the town.

We parted for the night, and before I retired I decided to dismiss my foot-servant or the man whose attention I had called to that matter.

In the morning, after breakfast, he walked across the street to the post-office in his shirt-sleeves.

It was a fitting spot for a murder. The sandy road, arched by weeping trees that about the sunlight, led abruptly to a covered bridge.

Why did the murderer leave it there? Was his question involuntarily asked of himself, as the white face and staring eyes met our gaze.

"Look!" cried one of the men, pointing to the closed hand, and we saw for the first time that it held a little tuft of coarse, black hair.

"This may be a clue to the murderer," said the squire. "Mr. Brown, you will hold the body. Had we not better remove the body at once to Brownfield's?"

Brown assented, and we formed a little funeral procession and bore the dead woman to the town.

The two laborers who had discovered the body were involuntarily asked the woman was fond of taking long walks in the afternoon, and that on the evening of her death she had been seen leaving her house, by a woman who testified that she saw a man, who wore no coat, join her in the little wood park and enter into conversation with her.

Who could have committed the crime? Hobbey was not the object, for the woman's purse, containing two dollars, was found by her side, or rather a little eastward, and she carried suspended from her neck.

My business kept me in Brownfield a week after the murder, and I left there with no nearer to solving the mystery of the murder than they were when they left.

I remember how, a month afterward, I lay on my bed in a distant town, thinking it over, when I felt confident that I could clear up the mystery in which I was shrouded.

Arrived there, I made inquiries concerning the murder. A reward had been offered for the murderer, but as yet had not been captured.

The lock of hair in the dead woman's hand matched his own exactly, and he loved the woman, but she had repulsed him. He soon found that the murderer was a woman.

The captain paid the penalty of his crime. It was the first detective work I had ever done, and I hope it will be the last.

HOUSEHOLD.

Worm the flour in winter. If not first-class brand, wash two or three bolted potatoes to mix with it.

THIRTY YEARS WITH CANNIBALS. The experience of the Rev. Dr. John G. Paton in the New Hebrides islands.

DOMESTIC RECIPES. Corn Chowder—Fry out a large slice of fat pork and slice six potatoes.

Hickory-Nut Gingerbread—One half cup each of molasses, brown sugar and sweet milk.

Yorkshire Pudding—Allow one and a half rounded tablespoonfuls of flour and one-eighth of a teaspoonful of salt.

Macaroni au Gratin—Put a pint of canned tomatoes into a saucepan, add a teaspoonful of butter, a half-teaspoonful of salt, and a quarter of a teaspoonful of pepper.

Two-Egg Cake—One cup sugar and 2 eggs, well beaten, stir these together, then add 1 tablespoon sweet milk.

Three-Egg Cake—Three eggs beaten to a cream, 1-2 cups sugar, 1-2 teaspoon salt and 1 cup flour.

Padding Sauce—An excellent padding sauce for a cracker plum pudding is made in this way: Place 1 cup sugar in a bowl, break in 1 egg whole and beat together thoroughly.

Creom Biscuit—One rounded teaspoon soda, well dissolved in 2 cups cold buttermilk, 1-4 teaspoon soda dissolved in 1 cup sour cream, with buttermilk, 1-2 cup soft lard is sometimes substituted for the thick cream.
