MORTGAGEE'S SALE
To Elizabeth Frances Smith, wife of James D. Smith, of the City of Saint John, in the County of Saint John, in the Province of New Brunswick, carpenter, and the said James D. Smith, of the City of Saint John, in the County of Saint John, in the Province of New Brunswick, carpenter, and to all other persons whom it doth, shall or may concern. Notice is hereby given that by virtue of a Power of Sale contained in an indenture of Mortgage, bearing date the fourth day of September, A. D. 1904, made between John Bartlett, late of the City of Saint John, in the County of Saint John, in the Province of New Brunswick, carpenter, and to all other persons whom it doth, shall or may concern. Notice is hereby given that by virtue of a Power of Sale contained in an indenture of Mortgage, bearing date the fourth day of September, A. D. 1904, made between John Bartlett, late of the City of Saint John, in the County of Saint John, in the Province of New Brunswick, carpenter, and to all other persons whom it doth, shall or may concern. again, with the pessimism of the lean in body and spirit. "That ain't the good kind. The good kind is them that says at you, and comes down in the morning 'ouchy, and goes through your pockets and dresses up for church Wednesday night and Sundays." He paused, and then added, "Damn the good kind!"
The youngest looked at the tall, thin man, and the Bishop also turned towards him. Something in the Bishop's movement or expression made the man say:
"I beg your pardon for the language, sir. I forgot you were a parson."
"Oh, the language doesn't hurt me, my friend, if it doesn't hurt you," the Bishop said, "but I think you're mistaken. You are a good kind."
"So do I," said the fat man from next the window. The one with the reddish beard had appeared interested at the first hint of a discussion.
"Well, there's plenty more good ones than had one, anyhow," said the man in the striped shirt. The fat man nodded assent, the tall, thin man looking sulky, the youngest looking from one another, and the Bishop said, with asperity:
"Right you are. And some of them are good that the bad ones don't even make any difference in the average."
"Why I didn't know one o' that kind," said the tall, thin man, with the manner of one settling a disputed point.
The Bishop was young as a man, and very young as a Bishop, but had been much older his arder would not have been less, and had been much younger his courage could not have been greater. "Yes, it is a pity," he said, "I've known a good many. I think one I knew was good enough to make up for all the bad ones in the world."
They were all looking at him. "Your wife" asked the man sympathetically.
"No," replied the Bishop. "She was relation of mine, except by adoption; everybody called her 'Aunt Electa'." She was over eighty when she died, and that was three years ago, before I came West; but I thank God every day of my life that she lived long enough for me to know her."
The man with the reddish beard was looking keenly at the Bishop, and the man in the striped shirt said:
"I wish you'd tell about her, Bishop."
"I will," said the Bishop, and launched into his story.
"Any of you ever been in Virginia? Know those little quiet, dingy towns that seem to have not yet recovered from the war, where the old people still walk gently, and keep their shivers closed in the parlors of their big, lonely-looking houses? Well, I had a church in a town like that, and Aunt Electa lived in a big, gray house at the end of the street. The house had stood allowing the boys to help plant the trees. Just after the fire of '77 we practically proved your advice of Saturday. The example is to be seen in Forest street near the Marsh and beside the site of the old round house. We selected some of the roughest and toughest of boys and allowed them to plant some of the trees, showing them how to do so. These same toughs watched them with care and pride, and today they are an example of the best row of trees growing in all the city, now thirty years growing in one of the once roughest and dirtiest spots in St. John. Your advice and lesson on Arthur Day should be taken with heart and brains by the school people next year and put in actual practice."
Yours truly,
J. S. CLIMBO.

ALMOST ASPHYXIATED.
HARPSWELL, Me., May 9.—Mr. and Mrs. Stephen S. Morrill, aged about 75 years, were found in a stupor by neighbors today in their little cottage on Orr's Island. Their condition, which at late hour tonight was considered critical, was the result of inhaling coal gas, which issued from a defective stove in the cottage.
TWO DROWNED.
BOSTON, Mass., May 9.—Daniel Doherty, and Cornelius Crowley, both aged 38 years, of this city, were drowned by the capsizing of their rowboat in the wash of a steamer in Hull's Neck, off Fort Warren, tonight. Thomas Hunt, who was in the boat with the men, was saved.
The three men were attached to the marine corps at Fort Warren and were taking a pleasure trip about the fort in the smallboat.

ALASKA-YUKON-PACIFIC EXPOSITION
SEATTLE, June 1 to Oct. 16, 1909

GIBRALTAR, May 9.—The United States armed cruiser Montana sailed from here this morning for Alexandria. The Montana and North Carolina arrived at Gibraltar on May 5, and the North Carolina sailed for Alexandria two days later. These two vessels were sent to Turkish waters for the protection of American interests.

AMUSEMENTS.

TWO NEW VAUDEVILLE ACTS AT THE PRINCESS.
Emil Chevel, a solo and trick violin player, is the headline vaudeville feature at the Princess this week. Mr. Chevel is one of those wonderful men who is not bound to the plain bow for getting music out of the violin. He uses such articles as a feather duster, a washboard, or any odd thing that may come handy. The Marvellous Tenor is next on the programme and he has an act the like of which we have never shown in this house. He is a comedy juggler and the first one to appear on the stage at the Princess. Both of these acts will arrive for the evening performance. They will sing "Love's Dream is O'er" (Aesch), and the "Miserere" from "Il Trovatore" four times during the evening, and will be heard every afternoon during the week at 4 o'clock. Both Signor and Signora Silber possess remarkably fine voices, the former a robust tenor of most flexible and sympathetic quality, the latter a dramatic soprano. In Halifax they simply captivated the town with their numbers and were repeatedly secured. There will be frequent changes of programme during the week and Musical patrons are assured of a delightful season of the better class of vaudeville. Back of the Silbers the Nickel has an unusually fine array of musical pictures, a pretty little song by Miss Estelle. Secure seats early tonight.

NICKEL'S NEW MUSICAL FEATURE TODAY.

The Nickel presents another charming novelty today in the Silbers Operatic Duo, who on account of their arrangements will not be heard until 7:15 show in the evening. They will sing "Love's Dream is O'er" (Aesch), and the "Miserere" from "Il Trovatore" four times during the evening, and will be heard every afternoon during the week at 4 o'clock. FRANK AUSTIN AT "STAR" TONIGHT.

St. John's favorite illustrated songster, Mr. Frank Austin, will make his return here to St. John people tonight in the bright and cozy Star Theatre, Union Hall, North End. His opening number will be the latest Indian novelty "Golden Arrow" which will soon be a big hit here. The Star's pictures are also brand new, the leading feature being "Lies in the Snow," an Alpine drama, with a handsome St. Bernard dog as a hero. The Star's Orchestra will play Tuesday night.
