GLOUCESTER, Mass., Jan. 6 .- The fishing sch. Theodore Roosevelt of this port, which anchored inside the break- Unjustifiable Demands of water tonight, had on board nine happy passengers, comprising Captain Rupert A. Ryan, Mrs. Ryan and seven sailors, all of whom were rescued from the British brigantine Ohio yesterday off Grand Manan. The Ohio was leaking badly and had suffered the loss of sails and received other severe damage during the terrible gales of the past three days. The Roosevelt put a prize crew on board the Ohio and kept company with her until this evening when five miles off Thatcher's Island. The former then left her prize behind and proceeded to this port as rapidly as possible, leaving the prize crew to work the unfortunate vessel into port. With the present favorable winds it is believed this will be done during the tween the chief whips regarding seatnight.

Hardly had they put to sea justification for his attempt to grab when the wind came up strong from the best seats upon the opposition side the northeast, the weather became terribly cold, followed by a blinding snow storm off Grand Manan, the vessel caught the full force of the gale, the seas constantly breaking over her. On Wednesday morning a big wave swept over the vessel, carrying away a portion of her deckload, her binnacles and smashing the wheel. This rendered it impossible to steer the vessel and, tossed at the mercy of the sea she began to leak. All hands were called to the pumps, but the cold was so intense that the crew were frost-bitten and were soon forced to stop work. Another sea smashed the skylights, filling the cabin with water. Ryan was forced to take refuge in the upper bunk to escape drowning. The heavy seas not only flooded the vessel, but they also spoiled the ship's food and fresh water supply, while the vessel itself became a mass of ice from stem to stern.

With no fire, their food and water supply gone, the weather freezing cold and a raging storm in progress, the sufferings of those on the Ohio were terrible all through Wednesday night. About 8 o'clock Thursday morning the weather having moderated considerably, a sail was sighted and a signal of distress was raised by the halfno waste of material; even the dust frozen men on the Ohio and this was is used. BOSTON, Jan. 7.-An investigation of Boston's export trade shows that the new year has been opened favorably. The situation shows that every outgoing steamer will have all the freight it can carry for the next two months. New corn is coming in with a rush from the west; 120,000 bushels of Canadian wheat have arrived here within a few days from across the border on one of the railroad lines, and other allotments aggregating 100 .-000 bushels or more are booked over the same line Provisions have been coming in in such amounts as to even overtax the steamship capacities. The six steamers scheduled to carry grain from Boston this week took an aggregate amount of about half a million It is sometimes dangerous to stop a bushels.
