And the second secon symmetry that exists in human associ-ation, to invite only happy people to a social gathering. People often say, when they go over a list of names: "We will not invite this one, for he is sad; we will not invite this other, for she is sad; much alone that it might pain her to see people." How little human that ist On the other hand, when a somewhat sorrowful gathering is convend, we should not say: "Let everything be black: let each one wear a veil: let this ck; let each one wear a veil; let this be a gathering of people who can laugh no longer." That is a mistake. In so doing you divide the two sisters. You forget that sorrow and joy need each other. Life is an exchange, it is a happy union, a minging of all the powers of the soul and of all its emo-tions

> Oh! If you knew how much good th smile of a little child can sometimes do to those who suffer! Tou would learn from that child how to become a child again with those who suffer, you would not treat them according to your cruel sense of symmetry, according to your cruel sense of symmetry, according to your sad wisdom, which adds still more to their mounting and de-pression. And you would not strive to make elever combinations to prevent happiness from meeting sorrow.
