The Widow's Son

By Mrs. E. Southworth

To and fro, to amany times she walked until utterly exhausted she herself upon the sofa and asked: "Nancy, what o'clock is it?" "Ten o'clock, honey, and you ought to be in bed." "Only ten o'clock, and there are eight or nine hours of darkness yet and she may be out in all. Oh, my my heart! I cannot cannot endure it!" she cried, starting up and walking wildly up and down the room. Up and down, up and down, until again exhausted she fell upon the sofa.

"Now, honey, take an old woman advice and go to bed! It can't do any good for you to distract yourself in this way! Go to bed, and I will sit with you! Come, go to bed!" "Bed? Do you think me such an unfeeling wretch as to lie down in my comfortable bed while she is a homeless wanderer, through this dark, rainy night?" cried Lily Gay, bounding from the sofa and traversing the floor in the most excited manner.

Backward and forward, backward and forward, until once more worn out, she dropped upon the sofa and inquired: "Nancy, is the storm over, do you think?"

Nancy went to the window and looked out, and reported: "Yes, honey, it is done raining the clouds is a breaking away and the stars are coming out." "What time is it now?" "After eleven, honey! Indeed I wish you would go to bed." "Oh Nancy! don't talk to me of bed. But if you are sleepy lie down on the rug and take a nap."

"Well, honey, I just believe I will for I am dead asleep augh!" said Lily Gay, with a hideous grin. And she laid herself down upon the rug and fell asleep. Lily Gay again sprang up and resumed her walk to and fro, and to and fro, until again she sank prostrated upon the sofa.

And so she passed the hours of that night of anguish, alternately shaking wildly up and down the room, wringing her hands, and sinking prostrate and sobbing upon the sofa.

At six o'clock in the morning the door-bell sharply rang. Its sound did not wake Nancy, but it roused Lily Gay who was sobbing on the sofa, and she sprang up to open the door.

Owen and William stood there. "Any news of Lily May?" breathlessly inquired the young girl. "No, dear, no," replied Owen. Owen in a heartbroken voice, as he entered the hall and hung up his hat.

"Oh Heaven!" moaned Lily Gay. "You are up very early, my sister said Owen. Yes, I am up early, replied she. She did not tell him that she had not been to bed. "But you are very pale, Owen. And Willie must be tired. Go you two up to your rooms. You will find water and towels placed to your rooms. You and I will rouse Nancy and have breakfast got immediately. You must need it, she added for she did not wish Owen to enter the parlor and find Nancy sleeping there, and in that way discover that she, Lily Gay, had watched all night. They went upstairs as she directed them.

OPERATION WAS NOT NECESSARY

"Fruit-a-lives" Restored Her To Perfect Health

153 PAPERMAN AVE., MONTREAL.
"For three years, I suffered great pain in the lower part of my body, with swelling or bloating. I saw a specialist who said I must undergo an operation. I refused.
I heard about 'Fruit-a-lives' so decided to try it.
The first box gave great relief, and I continued the treatment. Now my health is excellent—I am free of pain—and I give 'Fruit-a-lives' my warmest thanks."

their dear faces, or a sound of their dear voices. She feared that they might be ill. Yet she dared not seek news of them lest she should betray her abode and be reclaimed by them. Sometimes in her intense desire to see or hear from them, she felt almost willing to be reclaimed, sometimes she felt even tempted to rush back to them. At such times she repeated her said formula: "Sorrow is better than reproach. It is for your honor I stand away, dear Lily! honor, dearest, dearest Owen!"

And so she would nerve her gentle heart to bear the indefinite separation and the incessant suspense. But all this wore upon the delicate girl. She lost her appetite and her sleep, she grew thin and pale. Mrs. Powis saw this and watched her in pity and uneasiness. And one day when they were sitting together engaged in needle work, the lady looking wistfully at the girl, said: "My child, are you pining after the friends you have left?" Lily May attempted to answer, but burst into tears instead.

"Do you wish to go back to them?" pursued the lady. "Oh, no, no, no! I must never go back!—never never go back!" sobbed Lily May. "But why, my child?" "I told you before, dear lady. I told you the first night that I came here. I cannot go back, because I should reproach in their home."

"But my child, one so innocent as yourself could not do so, it would be impossible." "Yes, I am innocent, no one in the world ever accused me of being otherwise, but yet I should carry dishonor to them by going back, I should indeed lady. And though I

Stomach Troubles Are Due to Acidity
Tells Safe, Certain, Speedy Relief For Acid Indigestion.
So-called stomach troubles, such as indigestion, gas, sourness, stomach-ache and inability to retain food are in probably nine cases out of ten, simply evidence that excessive secretion of acid is taking place in the stomach, causing the formation of gas and acid indigestion.
Gas distends the stomach and causes that full, oppressive, burning feeling sometimes known as heartburn, while the acid irritates and inflames the delicate lining of the stomach. The trouble lies entirely in the excess development or secretion of acid.
To stop or prevent this souring of the food contents of the stomach and to neutralize the acid, and make it bland and harmless, a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia, a good and effective corrector of acid stomach, should be taken in a quarter of a glass of hot water after eating or whenever gas, sourness or acidity is felt. This sweetens the stomach and neutralizes the acidity in a few moments and is perfectly harmless and inexpensive remedy to use.
An antacid, such as bisurated magnesia which can be obtained from any druggist in either powder or tablet form enables the stomach to do its work properly without the aid of artificial digestants. Magnesia comes in several forms, so be certain to ask for and take only Bisurated Magnesia, which is especially prepared for the above purposes.
