SENOR JOSE LIMANTOUR ANGRY

Senor Jose Yves Limantour, formerly Minister of Foreign Affairs in Mexico, is indignant at an accusation that he has been using his influence with European diplomatists in hope of hastening American recognition of the Huerta administration. He denied that he and President Diaz were forced to leave Mexico and declared that he has permanently retired from Mexican political and financial affairs.

> Fans who are continually asking about that play of two men on one base are informed that the play came up in the American League the other day at St. Louis. Milan was on third and Gandil on second. Milan started home but was chased back. Gandil had taken third. Catcher Agnew with the ball ran to the base and tagged Gandil. As he did so Milan stepped off. That gave Gandil a claim to the base. Agnew's next move was to tag Milan while off the base and he was called out. Of course there was a lot of fan argument with the same old proportion insisting that both men should be out.

President Comiskey appears to have rather the shade on Manager Chance in the argument over th value of the players in the Chase-Zeider-Borton trade. Chance says Comiskey handed him a couple of emons, that the White Sox-owner knew Zeider was a cripple and that Borton was no ball player. The facts seem to be, however, that Zeider's bunion which has kept him out of the game, wasn't a serious thing until he tried home treatment on it, and as Comiskey says Chance saw Borton play and knew what he could do. As for Chase it seemed to be the impression at the time, and no doubt Chance shared the feeling that Hall was pretty much of a lemon himself, at least he was of no value to the Yankees.
