GOD IN THE STORM. BY MISS PARDOE.

"Did you hear the storm last night, my child, As it burst o'er the midnight sky, When the thunder rattled loud and wild, And the lightning flickered by ?" "I heard no tempest, mother mine-I was buried in slumber sweet; Dreaming I stood in the soft moonshine,

With flowers about my feet." "Can it be, my child, that you did not hear The roar of the tempest-breath, As it scattered the rent leaves far and near In many an eddying wreath?" "No mother; my happy sleep was full
Of gentle and holy things—
Shapes that were graceful and beautiful,

And the music of angels' wings." "Yet the storm was loud my darling child-There was death on the hurrying blast; And vapours dark over-head were piled, As the hoarse wind bellowed past. "I thought not of clouds, my mother dear,

When I rose from my nurse's knee: You taught me that God is for ever near, So what danger could I see?" "I taught you well, my sinless one; Yet my own weak spirit quail'd,

As the midnight blast roll'd madly on, And the moon's calm lustre fail'd.' "Were you wrong, then, mother, when you said That God's eye turn'd not away, But in darkness watch'd about my head As it did on my path by day?" "I am rebuk'd!" was the meek reply,

As the mother bent her knee;
"On the lip of babes may a lesson lie-I have learnt one, child, from thee: His wrath, which makes the sinner weep, By a guilty conscience vex'd, Does but deepen the sinless infant's sleep, And rock it to gentler rest.

And while thunders hoarsely peal around, Speaking woe to the worldling's ear,
The Lord in His mercy stills their sound,
When innocence is near;
And while his living fire appals
The matter beautiful and the still The guilty here below, he shadow of the Saviour falls On childhood's sleeping brow.'

Passing next under the iron beams which are to support the organ gallery, I came to the seven temporary steps by which you descend to the body of the sacred building (the floor on the level with the plinth will be 41 feet above the present), and my gaze was fixed on the noble choir, without pillars, without gallery, without obstruction to the voice or sight, 127 feet by 61; the walls are now about 30 feet high (they are to run to 59 feet); and I imagined to myself a crowded native audience, with a native choir, assisted by the pealing organ, in some future age, chaunting, 'Thou art the King of glory, O! Christ.' A building in this stage looks three times as spacious as it will do when the floor is laid, the roof put on, and the pews and Cathedral stalls in their places: and, indeed, my mind was overwhelmed as I paced up and down this morning with, I hope, a prayer rising in my heart for my generous benefactors and supporters in India and England, and amongst the first, for the most Rev. the President, and all the members of the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge. As I left the Cathedral, I drove to the front, and surveyed it from the road. The great western window was well up: the elegant lancet forms of the adjoining ones (4 feet 6 inches, with a height of 22 feet) were beginning to appear; the band of 2 feet 9 inches was running across the whole façade, at 13 feet above the site; the buttresses had reached 35 feet, where their little cottage roofs turned sideways towards the walls, hide their retiring dimensions. The whole presented a substantial advance of the works since the Report of October 8, when the walls were only 13 feet from the place of site. It will, however, be still

HOW WE CAN SHOW OUR LOVE TO CHRIST.

Yea, but you may say, how can we now show our love to Christ? He is in heaven, and our bounty cannot reach so Lav high, we have Him not here to offer gold, myrrh, or frankincense, as the wise men did; or minister to Him of our substance, as some religious women did; or break a box of precious ointment and pour it on His head, as Mary did; or feast Him, as Simon did. or wrap His corpse in fine linen, as Joseph did; we have not His mother with us, to keep, cherish, or comfort her, as St. John did: yet we have His Spouse, His Word, His Sacraments, His Disciples, His mystical members; and if, out of sincere love to Him we honour his Spouse, the Church; we frequent his house, the Temple; we delight in his word, the Scriptures; we come reverently and devoutly to his board, the Communion Table: we give countenance and maintenance to his menial servants, the Ministers of the Gospel; and relieve his afflicted members, the poor and oppressed among us, we shall be as Johns to him, gracious in his eyes; Disciples, nay, which is more, beloved disciples; yea, so beloved that, to our endless rest and comfort, we shall lie in his bosom, not on earth, but in heaven. -Daniel Featley, D. THE STUDY OF THE BIBLE.

For what purpose, it may be asked, has the divine gift of reason been vouchsafed to us, but that we may employ it in the noblest of all occupations—the search and inquiry after God's eternal truth—the truth as it is in Jesus? The volume of Scripture is not a small one: there are in it numberless things two years and more before we can hope to see the hard to be understood-many, very many, which require great solemn service of consecration.
