both lungs were nearly gone. At the hospital he met a ruddy-complexioned, healthy girl; they fell in love, and she undertook to nurse him back to health. In nursing him she contracted tuberculosis. She faded to a living skeleton, her condition keeping pace with his. For three years they occupied adjoining cots, each endeavoring to cheer the other, and at length, when their earthly days seemed few, decided to die as man and wife.

At Einsiedeln, Switzerland, a remarkable marriage took place in the principal church. In 1870 a wealthy Swiss couple living in the neighborhood became engaged, but on the breaking out of war between France and Germany, the fiancé left the country to serve under the French flag. The couple then drifted apart for the ensuing forty-two years; and, strangely enough, each married three times during this period, the husband losing three wives by death, and the wife three husbands.

A Kentucky couple, recently, after their wedding sailed immediately for China. The bridegroom did not care much for going there, but his bride had made it a condition before marrying him that the first five years of their wedded life must be spent in the missionary field in that country. The bridegroom

"This allowing Sue to spoil everything for you. She is a fine woman. I appreciate her thoroughly, but she has fallen into the habit of skimming the cream of everybody's pleasure by belated advice. Your only chance of comfort in that suit is to stop her before she says anything. Here she is, by the way, coming up the path this minute. Now remember—this is your chance to strike for freedom."

"Oh, I couldn't!" Mrs. Burnett faltered, as a clear voice sounded in the hall.

"Strike for your altars and your fires," her sister-in-law whispered, and then someone else was in the room.

"How do you do, everybody?" Sue called, cheerfully. "Isn't this glorious weather? Well, Elsie, so your suit has come home. I wonder—" Sue eyed the new suit consideringly, a frown creeping between her brows.

Elsie caught her breath, and glanced desperately at the two allies.

"Sue, please don't!" she faltered.

"Don't what?" Sue asked, in surprise.

"Don't say it—what you always do, you know—about thinking the green would have been better, after all. You see—" and there was a quiver in her voice, "it seems so nice to have a whole new suit, and I just love it, and I want to think I look nice in it, and—" said he would go to China or any other place to win her, and those who saw the bride said that he was wise.

A girl was engaged to marry a naval officer stationed at Shanghai, and their wedding fixed for the fall. The trouble in China breaking out, however, the young officer was refused leave of absence. Rather than put off the wedding, the young lady, accompanied by a married friend, crossed through Siberia and thence to China where the marriage was celebrated.

Her sister looked at her sharply. For a moment there was silence—then she laughed.

"What nonsense, child! I was just going to say that brown was your color," she declared.

"With Shining Morning Face"

"This luminous paint," said a young father, according to the Philadelphia Record, "ought to be an excellent thing among families."

"How so?" asked a friend.

"Why," said the young father, "you just touch up the baby's face with it before retiring, and then you can see to give him his bottle without making a light."

A Gentle Rebuke

It was late in the year for strawberries, but Mrs. Beacon was determined to have some for Sunday dinner. Over the telephone came the news that they were "very fine, ma'am, very fine indeed." Being, however, a cautious housekeeper, she decided to look over the fruit herself, as the grocer was not always to be trusted.

"They don't appear very good," she said, somewhat later, examining carefully a basketful. "They look,"—here she extracted one and tasted it—"they look a little green. I don't know. Just let me try one." She took another. "I guess I'll take one box, please. You don't put very many in a box, do you?" she inquired.

"There was," said the grocer, respectfully, "but there's been so many ladies looking 'em over that there ain't—"

"You may give me two boxes," said Mrs. Beacon.

The Escape

Little Mrs. Walter Burnett, coming downstairs in her new winter suit, glanced with shy delight from her husband to her sister-in-law. The Burnetts were young, and would have been poor had they not been so rich in other things than money. Mrs. Walter had not had a winter suit since her marriage, two years before, and the sensation of feeling herself again in the style made her pretty face under the brown hat as vivid as a rose. Her husband looked at her adoringly, and remarked that she was "a stunner." Her sister-in-law's approval was more classically expressed, but no less warm.

"Even your sister Sue can't find any fault with that," she said. A bit of the brightness faded from Mrs. Burnett's face.

"Oh, Sue!" she said, with a laugh that she tried to make light. "It would be too much to expect Sue to like it. She always thinks the other thing would have been better."

The sister-in-law eyed her shrinking young relative sternly.

"Now, Elsie," she said with decision, "it is time to stop this."

"Stop what?" Elsie parried, feebly.
