SOME PRESS NOTICES.

"This volume of The Bodley Anthologies is certain to delight the heart of every angler. It is an admirable volume and an individual one."—Black and White.

"A capitally representative collection of verse referring to the angler or his art. . . . The book is illustrated with a series of etchings characterised by great delicacy and beauty of detail, by Mr. E. Philip Pimlott."

Westminster Budget.

"An angler's anthology ought to be a charming book. . . . This book is as delightful as such a book ought to be, and might be recommended as an ideal pocket-volume for anglers, if it were not too pretty to be exposed to the risk of a wetting in a treacherous pool."

Glasgow Herald.

"Mr. Buchan has been happily guided. The book deserves a place beside the 'Compleat Angler' itself."

Birmingham Post.

"This book is essentially 'The Angler's Song-Book.' . . . I hope I have cited enough to induce many readers to want more, and therefore to possess themselves of this pretty book. . . . It contains some exquisitely characteristic etchings by E. Philip Pimlott."

The Fishing Gazette.

"Every collector of angling literature will be glad (and indeed bound) to have this dainty volume on his shelves."—Field.

"Songs chosen with the judgment and taste that we expect from such a gentle-hearted writer as the author of 'Scholar Gipsies.' . . . The etchings, six in number, by Mr. E. Philip Pimlott, are very beautiful and worthy of this handsome production of the Bodley Head."

Liverpool Mercury.

"A tempting book, and one has to exercise some self-control not to quote it in bulk."—Daily News.

"A feast of rare delight."—Bristol Mercury.

"We may be thankful for the extracts, which give us a taste of the quality of Kingsley, Matthew Arnold, and Andrew Lang; and as charming as any of them is Mr. Buchan himself in his epilogue to Master Izaak Walton."—National Observer.

"The preface which Mr. Buchan writes to the songs is an excellent piece of literary work, full of the spirit of poetry and of nature."—Bradford Observer.
