A REFLECTION.

HAST thou e'er mark'd within the verdant dale,
The lowly flow'ret's humble drooping head?
Which bows, obsequious, to each passing gale,
And far, unheeded, doth its fragrance shed?

Whose simple beauties doth resplendent shine,
But too concealed from the eye of day;
It blooms unnotic'd by all passing eyes,
Is cheak'd by weeds, and quickly feels decay.

Thus 'tis with merit—when a cold disdain
Surrounds the heart—with ev'ry prospect dire,
The smile approving—is the only pain,
Which leaves the man unfriended to expire.

A young lady in England was, a short time past completely recovered from a consumption by drinking tea made of camomile flowers gathered in the morning when the dew was on. The hint was taken from observing a sick dog proceed to the camomile bed each morning and suck the dew.
