Why Grow Culls Instead of Potatoes?

את התיומים לא התיום התיום

Six Steps to Good Potatoes:

- 1.—Provide Root Room.
- 2.—Control Soil Moisture.
- 3.—Use Good Seed of Best Variety.
- 4.—Spray to control insects.
- 5.—Select disease-free stock and spray to control
- 6.—Provide the Crop with abundance of suitable plantfood.

That a plentiful supply of Potash is necessary for bes results in fertilized Potatoe is shown in the result of a 3 year test by Maine Agricul tural Experiment Station.

Analysis	Yield .
Ammonia	Phos. Acid	Potash	Per Acre
5% 5% 5%	8% 8% 8%	0% 2% 8%	275 bus, 306 bus, 321 bus.

The Dominion Experimental Farms Found:

1 acre potatoes unfertilized yielded 75 bus. 1 acre potatoes fertilized and manured yielded 200 bus.

This is an increase of 166% over the unfertilized. Practically the same labor was involved to prepare ground, cultivate and spray the 200 bushels crop as was needed for the 75 bushels crop.

What they Say:

"A study of the average returns from five stations is most interesting and reveals the fact that, without a single exception, ferlilizers were profitably employed. . . . In vegetable growing the comparative yields from heavy manuring combined with chemical fertilizers corroborated the work of previous years in the control of the contr showing that larger yields and earlier maturity can be obtained at much less cost, by a combination of chemical fertilizer with manure, than by the application of manure only."

-Dominion Experimental Farms Report, 1918

Big yields, good quality, high percentage of marketable potatoes are produced by proper soil preparation and abundant, suitable fertilization.
