BODY OF NEW BORN BABY FOUND

Thos. Cordick, an employee of the Town of Warton, made a startling discovery on Monday last, while cleaning debris from the bed of Taylor's creek, when he found the body of a new-born baby boy wrapped in a strip of oilcloth. Mr. Cordick immediately notified Mayor Gilpin, and Chief of Police Thomas Bone, who had the body taken to Dr. Hough's office where an examination was made before removing it to Hender-son's Funeral Parlors. Dr. Hough declared the body had been in the water four or five days. The small body which weighed ten pounds, was disfigured badly by the actions of the water. It is thought that the body died a short time after birth and that it was thrown into the creek four or five days ago while the creek was flooded by last Thursday's storm. No clue has yet been found as to whom the baby belongs or how it came to be disposed of.

FORMER CARRICK MAN SUICIDES

The following taken from the Kitchener News-Record refers to Jos. Kohl, a son of the late Andrew Kohl of Mildmay. Deceased was brought up in Carrick and will be remembered by many here.

Joseph Kohl, aged 68, was found dead in his kitchen at 93 West Lancaster street shortly after seven o'clock last Thursday morning by his brother-in-law, George B. Schell. Gas was discharging from two burners in the gas stove at the time. Dr. L. J. Crowle was called and life was found to be extinct. Dr. Crowley called Coroner Honsperger who pronounced death due to poisoning. The case is evidently one of suicide.

Kohl was found seated beside the kitchen table at the time, his body bent forward as if in sleep. The police were immediately notified and Detective Blevins responded. The house was filled with gas indicating that the burners had been turned on for some time before the deal man was found.

Kohl and his wife, it is believed, have been at odds for some time. They were before Magistrate Weir Wednesday morning when a charge of non-support laid by Mrs. Kohl was heard in the magistrate's private office. Mrs. Kohl did not remain in the house Wednesday night, but was there until about 10 o'clock, a neighbor woman being with her until she left. She spent the night at her brother's home and returned to her own home next door about 7 o'clock. Finding the house locked, she opened the front door with her key. When the door was opened she became aware of the odor of gas and suspecting that something was wrong called her brother who entered the kitchen and found Kohl's body. Mr. Schell notified the police and called Dr. Crowley.

Kohl conducted a grocery store at the corner of Lancaster and Louisa streets. It is understood that he has been in despondent condition for some time owing to the differences between himself and his wife.

Evidence about the house showed that Kohl had been sleeping as the bed was unmade. He evidently arose early in the morning. It is alleged he had been drinking of late. Nearby was a whiskey bottle practically empty and his pipe and some tobacco. The body was still warm when found, rigor mortis not having set in to any extent. Kohl was fully clothed with the exception of shoes.

Coroner Dr. Honsperger announced there would be no inquest, as he believes it a plain case of suicide. Besides his wife the deceased is
