A Changeable Taffeta Silk Gov Many Attractive Points - A Very Pretty Confection In Mercerized Checked Lawn-Fancies In Belts.

The only refuge of those who sigh for simplicity is the tailor made elaboration, and a multitude of details still mark every other department of fashion. Changeable silk remains one of the season's favorites, and in this ef-fect is the silk gown chosen for the green. Deft embroidery carried out in the tiniest folds of the silk itself enhances the two flounces, which carry also a tiny white lace edging. A tucked pale blue chiffon chemisette, scrolled all over with lace, accompanies the pretty pouching bodice, while the Henri II. sleeves are faced up and down with deep cuffs and finished with lace and soft blue chiffon ruffles. Of a more summery type is the sec ond model given, which is to be carried out in zephyr or mercerized lawn finely checked with black, the skirt carrying three volants of embroidered lawn and the corsage a bewitching three tier cape of the same. The belt would be pretty in pale blue suede, a touch of relief that might be repeated in a scarf on the hat, together with a wreath of shaded red roses.

White foulard with black rings upon it makes a very striking costume, with tucked white muslin forming the lower portion of the sleeves and the collar. The belt is of black glace, the hat of white straw and white roses. Exceedingly attractive materials are

"As soon as a book is reported lost a show: 'I was badly run down and very nervous. Each day brought its share of household duties, but I was too weak to perform them. My nerves were in a terrible condition. I could not sleep and the icast sound would startle me. I tried several medicines and tonic wines, but none of them helped me. In fact I was continually growing worse and began to despair of ever being weil again. One day a friend called to see me and strongly advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I decided to de so, and it was not long before they check is made against it in the bank, and the loser is requested to advertise the loss. For from a fortnight to thirty days ensuing no money can be withdrawn on that account, unless the book shall be found. If not found the depositor must apply for a new book. Generally an affidavit must first be made that the loser cannot find the book and that it has not been transferred or assigned. "All this is scarcely necessary, but Williams' Pink Pills. I decided to do so, and it was not long before they began to help me. I gained in strength from day to day; my nerves became strong and quiet, and after using about a half dozen boxes of the pills I was fully restored to my old time health and cheerfulness. I now think Dr. Williams' Pink Pills an ideal medicine for weak women."

The Williams' Pink Pills feed the it makes a bank absolutely safe in respect to that deposit, and it puts the depositor to enough trouble to make him or her careful thereafter. Every thing having been performed as out lined, the depositor may get a new book, which means opening a new ac-count, as accounts are never duplicated.

"In my experience of many years I do not recall a case where finders have Dr. Williams' Pink Pills feed the nerves with new, rich red blood, thus strengthening and soothing them, and curing such nerve troubles as presented books in hopes of withdrawing money. ANCIENT BABYLON.

The Way the Excise Question Wa Handled by Its Solons. A translation of King Hamourabi's code, written about 2,250 years before

Christ, gives us an insight into the life of the great city of Babylon at that remote time and of the way in which the excise question was handled by its legislators Nearly all the dealers of wines and liquors at that time were women, as code speak only of women as sellers of drinks. Severe measures were taken against those who adulterated the wines or mixed them with water, so as to safeguard the purity of the article for the use of the public. The barmaid was held responsible for all disorderly scenes or drunkenness in her premises and death was the penalty for thos who did not denounce all cases of drunkenness to the police. Those women who were employed in the temples were forbidden to enter public hostel-ries under penalty of death, and even drinking in private was forbidden to

Special police officers were detailed for the enforcement of the excise laws in the city of Babylon, but then as well as now the officers charged with this duty were, if we are to believe the code in question, either negligent in the performance of their duties or willing to accept bribes from the barmaids in the shape of drinks or even money.

Severe punishment is dealt out in the document to the police officers who shall accept bribes in connection with the enforcement of the excise laws of Babylon, but it is probable that then as well as now many of the fair saloon cers and evade the laws.

CHURCH ALES.

An Old English Custom That Was Suppressed In 1603.

From almost the earliest times in England "church ales" were often given in a building adjoining any church, where were a hearth of good compass and a stout oaken table upon which the "ale" and viands were set forth. The founder of the feast gave his best brew and was content to receive money in exchange, the spirit animating these quasi religious symposia being akin to that which obtains at the modern charity bazaar-that is to say, all who attended were prepared to pay lib-erally or even dearly for their fare.

Thus the man who had lost his mon ey and was "down on his luck" would give a "bid (begging) ale" that, if he was popular, might suffice to set him on his feet again. The more romantic "bride ale" assisted penurious young couples into housekeeping, while a prosaic "Whitsun ale" was furnished by churchwardens, who used to raise money for the poor, for church repairs or other pressing cause, the malt previously presented to them and stored in the tithe barns.

Dancing was indulged in at such "church ales," and if the season were propitious an adjournment might be made to an adjacent meadow, where archery, quintain and other diversions would ensue. But excesses became more and more frequent, so that in 1603 "church ales" were summarily suppressed.

The Juvenile Japanese There are no children in Japan. They are dignified burlesques on the grown-ups. The little girls of the family take care of the babies by having them strapped to their backs. Nearly every maid of five or six has a baby tied to her back, and perhaps that accounts for the bent back and tottering gait of the Japanese woman. Though one never hears a Jap baby cry, if one begins to make a mouth and wrinkle up its funny little face, its child mother quiets it by raising her body on her toes and heels as fast as she can, and placidity reigns in short order. A man would feel like a fool quoting "Mother Goose" to a Japanese child or trying As for chucking one under the chin, that's unthinkable.

Blind Boys' Feotball.

Football and many other outdoor games are played by the blind, certain changes being made so that in each game the sense of hearing takes the place of sight. In football, for instance, a tiny bell is fastened to the ball, and by the bell's tinkle the ball's location is determined. The blind delight in races of all sorts. They do not run toward a tape, as the seeing do, but toward a bell that jangles briskly, It is odd to see the blind at their games. They play gravely and they maintain a profound silence, for if they made a noise the voices of their guiding bells could not be heard
