Johnny's Pockets.

BY ANNA B. AVERILL.

"Not a pocket, sir; not a pocket in that whole suit!"

Johnny's face was the picture of dismay.

"Why, Aunt Jane, what shall I do without them?" he said, in a slow bewildered way.

"You wont be likely to raise toads about your person, or be caught walking into church looking as though you had a pumpkin on each hip."

"But my handkerchiefs, Aunt Jane?"

Aunt Jane smiled grimly.

"Handkerchiefs, indeed! How long did you ever keep one before it was lost, and when were you ever known to use one? No; I came to the conclusion, before I decided to make this suit up without pockets, that a handkerchief with you was—a—supernumerary."

This silenced him. Aunt Jane was in the habit of quenching with long words his small attempts at argument. He was carrying several at the present moment undigested in his busy little brain, a burden and a perplexity.—So he walked away quite dejectedly in his new clothes, and Aunt Jane retired to her clear starching with a triumphant smile.

"Hullo, Johnny!" called Willie Brent from the middle of the street, as Johnny was passing through the gate. "Lend me your knife, please; see, I have broken mine."

Johnny's hands instinctively sought the outer seams of his trousers. Then he blushed, stammered, and the hands fell despairingly beside him.

"I—I left it in my other clothes," he said in a low voice.

This was true, but Willie regarded him with a slight expression of wonder in his handsome face.

"Your clothes are new, aren't they?" he said, pleasantly, noticing them for the first time. "You look fine, Johnny."

Johnny's heart sank. What if Willie knew the hollow cheat they were! He glanced down guiltily at the miserable sham pocket flaps on the Jacket and vest. How could he bear to have the boys discover his condition? How long could he conceal it? Who would be the first to find it out, and what would the boys think, and say, and do, if they knew? These were a few of the questions that began to torment him. He would beg Aunt Jane to let him wear his old mended suit—but she would not consent to this, for she had sat up nights lately harrying to finish these clothes, and he had heard her say she was "ashamed of her life" to have him seen going to school in those shabby garments.

Johnny went up the street, and he wandered away aimlessly by himself.

The further he went and the longer he mused, the more sharply did he realize his disagreeable plight.

He clasped his hands above his head and walked, he crossed them behind his back and walked, he folded them over his breast and walked, and tried to forget—and couldn't! Then he tried to comfort himself with useless arguments.

Might not a boy live and enjoy himself tolerably well without pockets? Aunt Jane was right about the handkerchiefs. He never needed one.—His slate pencil was tied to his slate in his drawer at school, where he kept his lead-pencil, his pens and his rubber, that he might have room in his pockets for more precious things.

But alas, and alas! After long and serious debate with himself, he remained unreconciled.

A week passed away. The scholars at school all noticed the change that had come over little Johnny Blake, and wondered at it.

"Don't you see, Amy," asked Will Brent of his sister, "how different he is? He hasn't played ball once this week; he wouldn't go fishing yesterday; he mopes by himself half of the time, and he says he isn't sick, either."

Amy Brent a motherly girl of fourteen, opened wide her blue eyes and regarded her brother thoughtfully.

"But he was always quiet, Willie," she said.

"Oh, yes," exclaimed Will, somewhat impatiently. "But I know Johnny Blake well enough. You watch him, and you'll see what I mean."

And Amy watched—and saw—more than Willie had seen, more than Johnny would ever have told; for she discovered his secret.

At the close of another week, she drew her brother aside one evening at home.

"Can you keep a secret, Will?" she asked him, earnestly.

"Yes," he answered, without hesitation, much impressed by her manner. And then and there she unfolded a well matured plan in which he was to assist—a plan requiring no small coolness and skill, and considerable daring, but which immediately met with his full and hearty approval.

Meanwhile, Johnny Blake had declined perceptibly in flesh and spirits. From a rosy, happy boy, never noisy and obstructive, but busy and healthy in mind and body, he became a listless solitary.

In school he was still faithful and patient at his studies, but out of school he avoided his playmates all that was possible, and one wish became uppermost in his heart—to conceal his disgrace, for as such he had come to regard it,—from the world.

To Aunt Jane the change was not yet apparent. If he was a trifle quieter than usual, she congratulated herself upon his improvement.

And now two weeks had passed away. It was ten o'clock on a pleasant moonlit night. Johnny had lain awake long after retiring for the night, gazing through his open chamber window at the clear, soft sky. Aunt Jane had frequently cautioned him against leaving this window up, for it was just over the low roof of the wood-shed, and once, in the middle of the night, when Will Brent had slept with him, two strange cats had bounced in, tearing and fighting each other, and awakened the whole house. But this was one of the many injunctions that Johnny sometimes "forgot." To-night he had been thinking over a great many things, and at last he fell to wondering if it were quite right to let the affair of the pockets acquire the proportions it had assumed. It had all come over him afresh, how entirely his life at school and among his friends was changing, and he tried to resolve that he would rise above it. But how? He tried to imagine how Will Brent would have laughed off such a calamity and made the best of it. But Will was two years older than he, and then such a thing could never have happened to Will, for he had a mother; and mothers never made their boys' clothes without pockets. Such a thing was never heard of before, nor read of, in all the annals of boyhood. Johnny's heart was very sad. He fell asleep, at last, still unreconciled.

He was awakened by some one's pronouncing his name, in a loud, squeaky whisper. He opened his eyes in slow bewilderment. The moon was still shining brightly, and there, close beside his bed, was the queerest figure! A little, bent and humped old woman, in a peaked and ruffled cap, looking at him through great, shining spectacles, and smiling in a calm, superior way.

"Johnny," she said, in a curious whisper, "I am your fairy godmother, and I will take your clothes away, and put some pockets in them, and bring them back long before morning, if you will be still, and say nothing to-night. Promise, with a nod, quick; if you speak the charm will break!"

Johnny had read a great deal about fairy godmothers, and believed in them. He gave the nod, and watched the strange creature disappear noiselessly through the window with his clothes. He seemed to be still in some enchanted land of sleep. It did not seem strange to him that this thing should be, with the moon shining on the floor, and his dreams thick about him. He did not stir in bed, nor move his head on the pillow, and he remembered no more until the morning sun was shining in his eyes, and Aunt Jane was calling him to breakfast.

He jumped out of bed. There were his clothes hanging upon a chair, exactly as he had left them.

He took them up with a puzzled, incredulous smile, at the thought of his strangly vivid dream; but he could not resist peering under the pocket flaps of his jacket.

He sat down suddenly on the side of the bed, rubbed his eyes, winked hard, and looked again.

There were pockets under the flaps!

He sat as if stunned. He looked through the window into the bright glad sky. The swallows were darting and twittering, the robins were singing aloud for joy; and a pure deep, and blessed thankfulness began to swell up in his heart. He examined the garments over one by one. There were seven pockets in all; two side-pockets and a breast pocket in the jacket, two in the vest, and two in the trousers!

He could hardly keep the tears back, or refrain from singing aloud with the gay robins; but he dressed and went down to breakfast with a new light in his eyes, which Aunt Jane did not see. How could he tell Aunt Jane? And nobody else in the world had ever known! So he kept this new joy to himself, as he had kept his trouble, regaining his lost rosiness and growing happier every hour, until, at last, he came home from school one day in such a state of bulge, that Aunt Jane, who had beheld him from afar, pounced upon him with wonder passing description, and he felt that concealment was no longer possible.

Then he told her the whole, straightforward story, as it had taken form in his simple, believing heart, and she knew that he spoke the truth. She had learned long ago to put absolute trust in his word.

She held him off at arm's length, and looked into his eyes a full minute, in utter, dumb astonishment.

"To whom have you been complaining about your not having pockets?" she demanded, when she could speak.

"To nobody, Aunt Jane. I never let a soul know. I—was ashamed."

And she knew that this, too, was true.

After taking a long time in which to become composed, and to think the matter over, she found herself so far from any possible solution of the matter that she was half-disposed to accept Johnny's explanation as the only one.

"At any rate, it's no use to make a fuss over anything you can't locate," she said, one evening, half to herself, as she was re-examining the mysterious pockets. "These pockets are good drilling, and they're put in strong and neat enough, but this work is no tailor's manipulation!"

"If—if a fairy godmother did it, it would be *woman*ipulation, wouldn't it, Aunt Jane?" said Johnny. "And that's a longer word still."—St. Nicholas.

Deferred Matter.

(Crowded out last week.)

OTTAWA, MARCH 16.

Mr. Landry asked whether it is the intention of the Government to grant to train conductors on the Intercolonial Railway, in the Province of Quebec, salaries equal to those paid to train conductors in the Province of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

Hon. Mr. Pope (Campton) said there were three grades of these officers; those who have been a long time on the Railway get $60 per month; those who have had considerable experience get $2 per day, the junior conductor received $1.50 per day. This system applied along the whole line of Railway.

OTTAWA, MARCH 17.

Sir John Macdonald moved the second reading of the Bill to amend the Indian Act of 1880. He stated that it provided against the sale of produce by Indians to traders for intoxicants and the trash that traders forced upon them, and besides this other regulations in the interest of these wards of the Government had been included. The motion was agreed to.

On the Intercolonial item Hon. J. H. Pope said the expense of running the Intercolonial had decreased $500,000 since 1877, and a great deal of this reduction had been brought about by economy in management. The loss last year was about $97,000, and during the last half year there was a profit of over $20,000. He thought they would be able to run the road to the end of the year without loss. To the rolling stock of the road there would be added ten locomotives, three first class cars, three second class, four conductors' cars, six cattle cars, 112 box cars, 121 block cars, and 50 coal cars of ten tons each, the total cost being $30,115 80.

On the item of $10,000 for a monument to the memory of Sir George Cartier, Hon. Mr. Langevin said the statue would be placed either in the Parliament buildings or within the grounds at the front. The remainder of the supplementary estimates were passed.

The bill to prescribe the oath to be taken by operators on Government telegraph lines was amended, so as to restrict them from divulging any message, whether public or private, and was passed.

On the tariff amendment bill Mr. Domville urged upon the Government the necessity of placing a duty of $3.50 a ton on pig iron, the admission of scrap free, and the fixing of a lower rate on blooms and billets.

Sir L. Tilley said the matter would receive the serious consideration of the Government between this and next session.

OTTAWA, MARCH 18.

On the item for $10,000 for a monument to Sir Geo. E. Cartier, Mr. Blake wished to record his dissent.

Hon. Mr. Langevin said eight years had passed since Cartier's death, and the bitterness of party strife was forgotten. It was in bad taste for the hon. gentleman to object to so slight a tribute to his memory.

Mr. McDougall thought sufficient time had elapsed since Sir George Cartier's death to allay party animosity.

Sir John regretted that the leader of the Opposition had objected to pay a small tribute to the memory of a man whom the majority of the people of Canada, Liberals and Conservatives alike, desired to honor. No one had done as much to allay hostile feeling between the two races as he had. His proudest boast was that he was a Frenchman speaking the English language. The proposed monument was only a fitting testimonial to his memory.

The other items in the supplementary estimates were concurred in.

A bill amending the steamboat inspection act, from the Senate, was read three times and passed, and the House adjourned at 1.30.

The Industrial Condition of Canada.

A couple of years ago our Canadian neighbors, tired of industrial stagnation, adopted a protective tariff in the hope of developing home industries. A return to a free trade policy is strenuously insisted upon by many Canadians, whose idea of national economy never rises above the sophistry of "buying in the cheapest market."

In an argument for the policy now under trial the Industrial World of Montreal describes a very hopeful state of things as its first fruits, and points out the obvious condition of the new prosperity:

"Suppose, for instance, a factory is opened in Montreal, giving employment to 1,000 hands, what does this mean? One thousand factory employes will represent a population of at least 2,500. What would the closing of this factory and consequent expatriation of these craftsmen mean? A loss of 1,000 to 2,500? Much more. These artisans require boots, shoes, hats, caps, meat, bread, roots, vegetables, medicine, clothing, houses, wood, etc., almost ad infinitum, and likewise each of the new or additional industries which they inaugurate or add to in all its various forms, require the same things. So that each thousand artisans probably adds, in one way or another, 5,000 additional to the population. Have our free trade friends ever considered this? What emptied one-fifth of the houses of Montreal under the late regime? The closing of the factories. What stunted the growth of the city during the dark era? The impediments which the tariff raised to the establishment of new industries and the development of diversified labor. All the artisans employed in the factories of metropolis wanted homes. It required carpenters, joiners, bricklayers, painters, plasterers, roofers, glaziers, workingmen of all kinds to erect these houses. It required vast quantities of agricultural produce to fill the stomachs of the various craftsmen which the tariff furnished with a purchasing power. And although to-day the same clouds floats over us, the same sun, moon, and stars light the heavens by day and night in the language of Webster, How altered! and how changed! Of 2,000 notes falling due on the 3rd of February in the Bank of Montreal, not one was protested!! Among the thousands of vacant houses in Montreal in '78, not an empty place is to be found, and the demand is for hundreds more. The market is flooded with money for investment. Canada fours are worth more than Canada sixes were formerly. Our alms houses, except for the old and infirm, are empty, and the soup kitchen is now a matter of history. The railways are unable to carry the freight offered to them, and the demand for increased accommodation is met by the employment of thousands of able hands, working day and night to meet the public wants! Never was there an era promising greater prosperity for Canada. Bank stocks have appreciated 37½ per cent., and all securities have become correspondingly improved in value, and the prospect of a £1,000,000 surplus for the financial year ending July 1, stares us in the face to terrify us into a free trade policy! If it is a bad policy to swap horses while crossing the stream we think it would be rather imprudent to risk a change from prosperity, under protection, to one of promised increased (?) aggrandizement under free trade."—Scientific American.

Items from the "Star."

On Sunday last his Lordship the Bishop of Chatham promoted to the order of Deaconship Mr. John Maillet, of St. Louis. He will be elevated to the holy order of priesthood on Saturday next. The ceremony, as on all like occasions, was solemn and impressive, and his Lordship in his sermon briefly pointed out to what a sacred calling the priesthood was, and what it exacted from its members. Rev. Mr. Maillet belongs to St. Louis, Kent, and studied in Memramcook College.

Mr. Phineas Gunn, Sweezey & Stewart and others, of Lower Glenelg, have commenced digging mud out of the river there. Mr. Charles Gunn of Chatham is making five new mud diggers for these and other parties. The mud is to be used as a fertilizer, and is said to be excellently adapted for that purpose.

Mr. Joseph Forest is about selling his residence on King's Street to Mr. James Searle of Napan, who is to continue his father's business there the coming summer. Mr. Forest has removed to Black Brook.

Mr. J. U. Loggie and others who are manufacturing lobster cans on Sheriff's wharf, Chatham, have turned out over 60,000 cans up to date. Mr. Loggie has purchased a salmon freezer from Mr. Chas. Boss of Bathurst, for the coming summer's work at Point aux Car.

The Bay du Vin Bridge completed a short time ago by Messrs. Carter and Crimmin of Chatham, fell on Sunday night last.

INVENTIONS THAT HAVE BEEN REJECTED may still, in most cases, be patented by us. Being opposite the U. S. When Inventors send models or sketches we make search in the Patent Office and advise as to its patentability free of charge. Correspondence confidential, prices low, and NO CHARGE UNLESS PATENT IS OBTAINED.

We refer to Hon. Postmaster General D. M. KEY, Rev. F. D. POWER, to officials in the U. S. Patent Office, and especially to our clients in every State of the Union and in Canada. For special references, terms, advice, &c., Address

Cathartic Pills

Combine the choicest cathartic principles in medicine, in proportions accurately adjusted to secure activity, certainty, and uniformity of effect. They are the result of years of careful study and practical experiment, and are the most effectual remedy yet discovered for diseases caused by derangement of the stomach, liver, and bowels, which require prompt and effectual treatment. AYER'S PILLS are specially applicable to this class of diseases. They act directly on the digestive and assimilative processes, and restore regular healthy action. Their extensive use by physicians in their practice, and by all civilized nations, is one of the many proofs of their value as a safe, sure, and perfectly reliable purgative medicine. Being compounded of the concentrated virtues of purely vegetable substances, they are positively free from calomel or any injurious properties, and can be administered to children with perfect safety.

AYER'S PILLS are an effectual cure for Constipation or Costiveness, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite, Foul Stomach and Breath, Dizziness, Headache, Loss of Memory, Numbness, Biliousness, Jaundice, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Dropsy, Tumors, Worms, Neuralgia, Colic, Gripes, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Gout, Piles, Disorders of the Liver, and all other diseases resulting from a disordered state of the digestive apparatus.

As a Dinner Pill they have no equal.

While gentle in their action, these PILLS are the most thorough and searching cathartic that can be employed, and never give pain unless the bowels are inflamed, and then their influence is healing. They stimulate the appetite and digestive organs; they operate to purify and enrich the blood, and impart renewed health and vigor to the whole system.
