A Successful False Prophet. The little daily claims to be a very reliable authority on matters of news, and aspires to be an oracle in regard to political affairs. It assured its readers that Messrs. Gregory and drunk. Allen's election was a foregone conclusion. In fact it stated, unqualifiedly, that the friends of the government had conceded the enjoying great prosperity. election of these two gentlemen, and only hoped to carry two men. It pretended to keep its readers reliably posted in regard to next annual meeting and the time will be the Northumberland election. In its issue the third Tuesday in February. on the evening of election day it informed its readers that Mr. Morrissey's election was assured beyond doubt. It makes a few other prophesies concerning certain convulsive movements, about to take place in the political world, over which it claims the power of second sight, and it professes to really expect its readers to seriously believe what it says, and would no doubt get on its ear if anyone were to suggest that it seems to have many of the qualities that go to
