The Poet's Corner.

Good by, Proud World.

Good bye, proud world! I'm going home; Thou art not my friend: I am not thine; Long through the weary crowds I roam -A river ark on the ocean b Long I've been tossed like the driven foam; But, now proud world, I'm going home.

Good bye to flattery's faning face, To grandeur with his wide grimace; To upstart wealth's averted eye, To supple office, low and high; To crowded halls, to court and street. To frozen hearts and hast'ing feet; To those who go and those who come; Good bye, proud world! I'm going home

I'm'going to my own heartstone, Bosomed in you green hills, alone; A secret nook in a pleasant land, Whose groves the frolic fairies planned, Where arches green the lifeloag day, Echo the blackbird's roundelay, And evil men have never trod A spot that is sacrea to thought and God.

Oh, when I am safe in my sy!van home, I tread on the pride of Greece and Rome: And when I'm stretched beneath the pines, Where the evening star so holy shines, I laugh at the lore and pride of man, At the sophist schools and the learned clan; For what are they all in their high conceit, When man in the bush with God may meet? RALPH WALDO EMERSON

Wesley's Tact.

The following anecdote of the founder of Methodism has, we believe, never been published. It reaches us from a trustworthy sourse, and it illustrates in a remarkable manner the mingled tact and piety of that eminent man. Although Wesley, like the apostles, found that his preaching did not greatly affect the mighty or the noble, still he numbered some families of good position among his followers. It was at the house of one of these that the incident here recorded took place. Wesley had been preaching and a daughter of neighboring gentleman, a girl remarkable for her beauty, had been profoundly impressed by his exhortations. After the sermon, Wesley was invited to this gentleman's house to luncheon, and with himself ore of his preachers was entertained. This preacher, like many of the class at the time, was a man of plain manner, and not conscious of the restrains of good society. The fair young Methodist sat beside him at the table, and he noticed that she wore a number of rings. During a pause in the meal the preacher took hold of the young lady's hand, and raising it in the air, called Wesley's attention to the sparkling jewels. "What do you think of this, sir," he said, "for a Methodist hand?

The girl turned crimson. For Wession to finery, the question was a peculiarly awkward one. But the aged evangelist showed a tact which Chesterfield might have envied. He looked up with

The Superintendent in Love.

Supt. E. J. O'Neill, of the Dominion Police Force, Ottawa, Canada, thus spoke to a representative of the of Ottawa's leading journals:—"I am actually in love with that wonderful medicine St. Jacobs Oil. I keep it at home and likewise here in my office; and though my duty should call me hence in an hour to journey a thousand miles, St. Jacobs Oil would surely be my companion. It is the most wonderful medicine in the world, without any exception, I believe. My entire family have been cured by it. We have used it for twenty cured by it. We have used it for twenty different ailments, and found it worth half a score of doctors. My men, here on the Dominion Police Force, use it right along and very justly think that there is nothing like it. I believe it is on the Dominion Police Force, use it right along and very justly think that there is nothing like it. A clergyman, lecturing on Palestine, remarked concerning one very rugged locality:—"The roads up these mountains are too steep and rocky for even a tains are too steep and rocky for even a donkey to climb, therefore I did not attempt the ascent." The reverend gentleman noticed the smiles which gently passed over the features of some of his hearers. Yet not seeing any particular reason why they should be amused, he pushed on with his discourse.
