Summary of Situation

The San Francisco fire is probably checked. A turn of the wind, which came late Thursday night, blew it back from the residence district, after it had leaped the gap which the soldiers had made with dynamite to save that part of the town. There is every hope that the ruins will be cooling in a day

Reports about the actual area of damage are conflicting. It is probable, however, that about three-quarters of the improvements on real estate is destroyed. The fringes of the city, scattered suburban residences, stand. Outside of that no considerable area is saved, except the better residence district of the western adultion and Pacific Heights. Except for 2 few mansions of the rich, some churches, and probably some suburban hospitals, every building in San Francisco is gone.

More than 200,000 people slept Thursday night in the concentration camps of the Presidio, Golden Gate Park and Fort Mason. There was a shortage of water, food was scarce and poorly distributed, and many went hungry and thirsty. While some supplies must have reached the city yesterday, and the United States Government is doing everything to rush rations. Gen. Funston has told the war department that there is imminent danger of famine. This stands to reason, for San Francisco has never kept more than three days ahead with its provision supply, and much of that must have been de-
