A couple of able-bodied men stood looking at The Advertiser bulletin-board "I don't think that Wilson would go to war if they shot down the White House," said one.

"Guess he wouldn't," said the other sidewalk fighter of battles. Just then there was a scurry of hoofs behind them, and the snap of horse tails about their ears. They woke up. The 7th Canadian Mounted Rifles had been passing along Dundas street, with a have stirred any real, red, Canadian But these two men and a woman or two were absolutely indifferent until a capering sorrel, with a grim mouthed, game little chap on his back, started to make a flank attack.

Is the man at home marking the war-Canada's war-his business? Perhaps the lack of leadership is the cause of indifference and lethargy.

It cannot be said that the 7th C. M. R. men lack leadership. There's no sloverly riding in that bunch. They are being put through, each man for himself, get your horse by the head, and keep him in line, nobody's going to help you, you're a trooper, and you've got to get up and ride at 'em, make your old feel his work and GET

And it speaks wonders for the men, some whom had never had a leg over anything but a merry-go-round steed be fore, that they can "sit" their mounts like veterans, free riders, and riders who carry their horses over slippery spots, able to use their "steels" with care and safety. By some instinct the men of the C. M. Dashing Old Cavairymen And scattered through the ranks one can see a dashing old cavalryman with a watchful eye over the youngsters. He may have served in the British army or done a trick with Uncle Sam. These men and their officers have done a great deal to give the mounted men the ance and poise that a troop must have unless it wants to be merely a mounted herd. The C. M. R. has its "seat," and it has the dash that goes with efficiency in mounted soldiery. Some day will strike a heavy blow of hide and boof and steel.

gives better results than the curing iron.

Just get a few ounces of plain liquid silmerine at your druggist's, and apply a little to the hair at night with a clean toothbrush, drawing this down one strand at a time from root to tip. In the morning your hair will be as beautifully wavy and curly as though Mother Nature did it, and it will be quite manageable, no matter what style of cofffure you adopt. The effect will last much longer than if you used a waving iron, and the health of your hair will not suffer. As silmerine is not sticky or greasy, it is quite pleasant to use.

The Hair-Destroying Curling Iron Passes The heated iron makes the hair dry and parched looking, burns off the ends, giving a most untidy appearance. You who have learned this from sad experience will be glad to hear of a very simple method which is open to none of the objections referred to, and which gives better results than the curling iron
