RARE TREES IN CANADA. Magnelias, Custard Apple and Atlanthus

From the Monetary Times.

One of the most interesting things onnection with tree planting is the extension by artificial means of the natural range of the growth of trees. The change s generally to a colder and more severe climate. In Toronto three kinds of magnolias are grown in the open air, one of which will attain a height of some forty feet. This is exclusive of the Liriodendron which is a native though seldom seen in its wild state much west of Hamilton; occasionally it is found near the southern corner of Georgian bay. The introduction of rare kinds is generally a slow process. Magnolias have been grown in Toronto for some thirty years; yet so seldom are they seen that the newspapers but last year spoke of one, on College street, as if it had been the first of its kind. The rarest tree grown here is received. rarest tree grown here is, perhaps, the gingo tree (Salisburia adi antifolio) of which it is doubtful if there be, out of doors, more than one specimen; yet that this native of China and Japan, which is never seen in Europe, we believe, south of the Mediterranean, thrives here, is a fact to be borne in mind. The aristolochia has the Mediterranean, thrives here, is a fact to be borne in mind. The aristolochia has been found difficult to reproduce; all attempts in hot houses have, so far as we know, failed; yet accident has given us proof that it can be put into condition to germinate and has germinated, after being a whole winter under ice. The seeds fell on a spot on which every winter ice, from melting snow and falling rain, forms to the depth of several inches. Having been under this ice in the winter of 1883-4, some seeds germinated, and the plants are now in the possession of the writer; one plant of this native of the south was allowed to remain under ice a second winter, and it commences the spring in a perfectly healthy state. The custard apple grows naturally as far north as Niagara, and its artificial reproduction here is not impossible. The tulip tree, before mentioned, few take the trouble to grow, though it can scarcely be said to be out of its latitude here. Over the merits of the alianthus it is possible to dispute; but when placed at a distance the merits of the ailanthus it is possible t dispute; but when placed at a distance dispute; but when placed at a distance from the dwelling, where the objectionable odor of the male tree from which the female is with characteristic gallantry presumed to be free cannot offend, its long lanceolate leaves give an oriental touch to the landscape. The dwarf chestnut, and the buckeye, another and beautiful variety of chestnut, can be grown here without difficulty; but seldom is either of them seen.

dimentry; but seldom is either of them seen.

Our nurserymen, as a rule, are content to go on the beaten track; they seldom trouble themselves to produce new varieties of trees; but if they do not wake from their slumber they must expect to be left behind. Of course for general purposes our own trees get, and deserve to get, the preference. But not all the beauty of the floral world is native to our soil. There is beauty in variety; and variety should now when opportunity effers, be sought after and encouraged. Even so beautiful a shrub as the burning bush (Wahoo) and one so easily grown, is seldom seen in our shrubberies.

For the wood it is desirable to learn by experiment, what is the most economical tree to grow. The allanthus, of which the wood is suitable for furniture, grows with extreme rapidity. The black walnut must either be reproduced, or its use in the manufacture of furniture be abandoned. At present it is perhaps the most profitable-tree that can be grown; and yet it is doubtful whether it is being planted to any extent worth mentioning. Along side of the black walnut, for economic value may be placed the hickory. Both of these, the most valuable of our native trees are being neglected. Most of the trees that are being planted are of comparatively little value. If common trees must have the preference, that is no reason For the wood it is desirable to learn by paratively little value. If common trees must have the preference, that is no reason why rarer kinds should not be assigned their true place; and this, we fear, is not at present being done. If we are now to begin to replant in earnest, the work should be done with discrimination and with a view to producing the best results, esthetic and economic.
