"For three years, I was a terrible sufferer from Indigestion, constant Headaches and Constipation. I took various medicines for the trouble but nothing seemed to do me any good.

Then, a friend advised me to try Fruit-a-tives'. Now I am free of Indigestion and Headaches, the Constipation is cured, and I have gained considerable weight; and my general health is fine.

'Fruit-a-tives' is a grand medicine and I cannot say enough in its favor." ALFRED DUBOISSEAU.

CHAPTER IV.

Aunty Rose Unbends. There never was a lovelier place for a little girl—to say nothing of a dog—to play in than the yard about the Stagg homestead; and this Carolyn May confided to Aunty Rose one forenoon after her arrival at The Cor-

Behind the house the yard sloped down to a broad, calmly flowing brook. Here the goose and duck pens were fenced off, for Aunty Rose w not allow the web-footed fowl to wander at large, as did the other poultry. It was difficult for Prince to learn that none of those feathered folk were There was a wide-branching oak tree on a knoll overlooking the brook. Around its trunk Uncle Joe had built a seat. Carolyn May found this a grand place to sit and dream, while Prince lay at her feet. When they saw Aunty Rose in her sunbonnet going toward the fenced-in garden they both jumped up and bounded down the slope after her. It was just here at the corner of the en fence that Carolyn May had her first adventure. Prince, of course, disturbed the serenity of the poultry. The hens went shricking one way, the guinea fowl lifted up their voices in angry chatter, the turkey hens scurried to cover, but the turkey cock, General Bolivar, a big, white Holland fowl, was act to have his dignity disturbed and his courage impugned by any four-

fan. His eyesight was not good, however. He charged the little girl instead of the roistering dog.

Carolyn May frankly screamed. Had the angry turkey reached the little girl he would have beaten her down and perhaps seriously injured her.

He missed her the first time, but turned to charge again. Prince barked loudly, circling around the bristling turkey cock, undecided just how to get into the battle. But Aunty Rose knew no fear of anything wearing feathers. "Scat, you brute!" she cried, and made a grab for the turkey, gripping him with her left hand behind his head, bearing his long neck downward. In her other hand she seized a piece of lath and with it chastised the big turkey across the haunches with Aunty Rose!" gasped Carolyn May at last. "He must be sorry." With a final stroke Aunty Rose allowed the big fowl to go-and he ran away fast enough.

"Your dog, child, does not know his manners. If he is going to stay here with you he must learn that fowl are not to be chased nor startled."

As a vermifuge there is nothing so potent as Mother Graves' Worm Extern-inator, and it can be given to the mast delicate child without fear of injury to

"Oh, Aunty Rose !" begged the little girl, "don't punish Prince! Not—not that way. Please don't! Why, he's never been spanked in his life! He wouldn't know what it meant. Dear

"I shall not beat him, Car'lyn May," interrupted Aunty Rose. "But he must learn his lesson. He must learn that liberty is not license. Bring him here, Car'lyn May."

She led the way to an open coop of laths in the middle of the back yard. This was a hutch in which she put broody hens when she wished to break up their desire to set. She opened the gate of it and motioned Prince to enter The dog looked pleadingly at his little mistress' face, then into the woman's stern countenance. Seeing no reprieve in either, with drooping tail he slunk into the cage.

said. "Poor Prince! Has he got to stay there always, Aunty Rose?" "He'll stay till he learns his lesson. said Mrs. Kennedy grimly, and went on into the garden.

Carolyn May sat down close to the side of the cage, thrust one hand between the slats and held one of the dog's front paws. She had hoped to go into the garden to help Aunty Rose pick peas, but she could not bear to leave Prince alone.

By and by Mrs. Kennedy came up from the garden, her pan heaped with pods. She looked neither in the direction of the prisoner nor at his little mistress. Prince whined and lay down. He had begun to realize now that this was no play at all, but punishment. He blinked his eyes at Carolyn May and looked as sorry as ever a dog with cropped ears and an abbreviated tail could look.

The peas and potatoes were cooking for dinner when Aunty Rose appeared again. There was the little girl, all of a dewy sleep, lying on the grass by the prison pen. Aunty Rose would have released Prince, but, though he wagged his stump of a tail had still her doubts regarding a mon-grel's good nature. She could not allow the child to sleep there, however; so, stooping, picked up Carolyn May and carried her comfortably into the house, laving her down on the sitting-room couch to have her nap out-as she supposed. without awakening her.

Aunty Rose came away softly and closed the door and while she finished getting dinner she tried to make no oise which would awaken the child. Mr. Stagg came home at noon, quite as full of business as usual. the truth, Mr. Stagg always felt bashful in Aunty Rose's presence; and he tried to hide his affliction by conversation. So he talked steadily through the meal. But somewhere—about at the ple course, it was—he stopped and looked around curiously. "Bless me!" he exclaimed, "where's Hannah's Car'lyn?"

"Taking a nap," said Aunty Rose composedly.

"Hum! can't the child get up to her victuals?" demanded Mr. Stagg. "You begin serving that young one separately and you'll make yourself work, Aunty Rose."

"Never trouble about that which doesn't concern you, Joseph Stagg," responded his housekeeper rather tartly. "The Lord has placed the care of Hannah's Car'lyn on you and me and I'll do my share and do it proper."

Mr. Stagg shook his head and lost interest in his wedge of berry pie, "There are institutions—" he began weakly; but Aunty Rose said quickly;

"Joseph Stagg! I know you for what you, are—other people don't. If the neighbors heard you say that they'd think you were a heathen. Your own sister's child!"

"Now, you send Tim, the hackman, up after me this afternoon. Fve got to go shopping. The child hasn't a thing to wear but that fancy little black frock, and she'll ruin that playing around. She's got to have frocks and shoes and another hat—all sorts of things. Seems a shame to dress a child like her in black—it's punishment. Makes her affliction double, I lo say."
"Well. I suppose we've got to flate money's coming from-"

"Didn't Car'lyn's pa leave her none?" asked Aunty Rose promptly.
"Well—not what you'd call a fortune," admitted Mr. Stagg slowly. "Thanks be you've got plenty, then. And if you haven't I have," said the woman in a tone that quite closed the question of finances. "Which shows me just where I get off at," muttered Joseph Stagg as he started down the walk for the store. "I knew that young one would be a

Carolyn May, who was quite used to taking a nap on the days that she did not go to school, woke up, as bright as a newly minted dollar, very soon after her Uncle Joe left for the store. "I'm awfully sorry I missed him."

she confided to Aunty Rose when she danced into the kitchen. "You see. I want to get acquainted with Uncle Joe just as fast as possible. And he's at home so little I guess that it's going to be hard to do it."

"Oh, is that so? And is it going to be hard to get acquainted with me?" asked the housekeeper curiously. "Oh, no!" cried Carolyn May, snug-gling up to the good woman and patting her plump bare arm. "Why, I'm getting 'quainted with you fast, Aunty Bose! You heard me say my prayers and when you laid me down on the couch just now you kissed me. Aunty Rose actually blushed. "There, there, child!" she exclaimed. "You're too noticing. Eat your dinner, that I've saved warm for you." "Isn't Prince to have any dinner, Aunty Rose?" asked the little girl. "You may let him out, if you wish, after you have had your dinner. You can feed him under the tree."

Carolyn May was very much excited about an hour later when a rusty closed hack drew up to the front gate of the Stagg place and stopped.

An old man with a square-cut chin whisker and clothing and hat as rusty as the back itself held the reins over the bony back of the horse that drew the ancient equipage. "I say, young'un, ain't you out o' yer bailiwick?" queried Tim, the hackman, staring at the little girl in the Stags vard. Carelyn May stood up quickly and tried to look over her shoulder and down her back. It was hard to get all those buttons buttoned straight. "I don't know," she said, perturbed. "Does it show?"

"Huh?" grunted Tim. "Does what show?" "What you said," said Carolyn May accusingly. "I don't believe it does." "Hey!" chuckled the hack driver suddenly. "I meant, do you 'low Mrs. Kennedy knows you're playing in her front yard?"

"Aunty Rose? Why, of course!" Carelyn May declared. "Don't you know I live here?" "Live here? Get out!" exclaimed

"Yes, sir. And Prince too. With my Uncle Joe and Aunty Rose.' "Pitcher of George Washington!" ejaculated Tim. "You don't mean Joe Stagg's taken a young-'un to board?" "He's my guardian," said the little girl primly. Aunty Rose appeared. She wore a close bonnet, trimmed very plainly, and carried a parasol of drab silk. Aunty Rose climbed into the creaky old vehicle. "Are you going to be gone long?"

asked Carolyn May politely. "Not more than two hours, child." said the housekeeper. "Nobody will bother you here-"Not while that dog's with her, I reckon," put in Tim, the backman. "May I come down the road to meet you, Aunty Rose?" asked the little girl. "I know the way to Uncle Joe's

"I don't know any reason why you can't come to meet me," replied Mrs. Kennedy. "Anyway, you can come along the road as far as the first house. You know that one?"

"Yes, ma'am. Mr. Parlow's," said Carolyn May. Carolyn May went back into the yard and sat on the front-porch steps and Prince, yawning unhappily, curled down at her feet. There did not seem to be much to do at this place. She had time now, had Carolyn May, to compare The Corners with the busy Harlem streets with which she had been familiar all her life.

"Goodness me!" thought Carolyn May, startled by her own imagination, "suppose all the folks in all these houses around here were dead!" They might have been for all the human neises the heard.

"Goodness me!" she said again, and this time she jumped up, startling Prince from his nap. "Maybe there is a spell east over all this place," she went on. "Let's go and see if we can find somebody that's alive." They went out of the yard together and took the dusty road toward the They soon came in sight of the Par-low house and carpenter shop. "We can't go beyond that," said arolyn May. "Aunty Rose told us Carolyn May, "Aunty Rose told us not to. And Uncle Joe says the carpenter-man isn't a pieasas; She looked wistfully at the pro ises. The cottage seemed quite as much under the "spell" as had been those dwellings at The Corners. from the shop came the sound of plane shricking over a long board.

"Oh, Princey!" gasped Carolyn May. "I b'lieve he's making long, curly shavings!" If there was one thing Carolyn May adored it was curls. Suddenly Mr. Jedidiah Parlow looked up and saw the wistful, dust-streaked face under the black hat brim and above the black frock. He stared at her for fully a minute, poising the plane over his work. Then he put it down and came to the door of the shop. "You're Hannah Stagg's little girl

aren't you?" he asked.
"Yes, sir," she said, and sighed.
Dear me, he knew who she was right. away! There would not be any chance of her getting a suit of long curls. "You've come here to live, have you?" said Mr. Parlow slowly. "Yes, sir. You see, my papa and mamma were lost at sea-with the Dunraven. It was a mistake, I guess, sighed the little girl, "for they weren't fighting anybody. But the Dunraven got in the way of some ships that were fighting, in a place called the Mediterranean ocean, and the Dunraven was sunk, and only a few folks were saved from it. My papa and mamn weren't saved."

"So?" said the carpenter, pushing his big spectacles up to his forehead "I read about it. Too bad—too might bad! I remember Hannah Stagg," h added, winking his eyes, Carolyn May thought, a good deal as Prince did "You look like her."

"Do I?" Carolyn May returned drawing nearer. "I'm glad I do. An I'm glad I sleep in what used to be her bed, too. It doesn't seem so lone

"So? I reckoned you'd be lonesome up there at The Corners," said the carpenter.

Mr. Parlow stripped another shaw ing from the edge of the board he wa plumbing. Carolyn May's eager ey followed that curling ribbon and he ips parted. The carpenter paused before push ing the plane a second time the length of the board. "Don't you want a dring of water, little girl?" he asked. "Oh, yes, sir—I would. And I know Prince would like a drink," she told him quickly.

"Go right around to the well in the back yard," said Mr. Parlow. "You'll find a glass there—and Mandy keeps a pan on the well curb for the dogs and

"Thank you, I'll go," the little girl said. She hoped she would see Miss

Amanda Parlow, but she saw nobody She went back to the door of the carpenter shop and found Mr. Parlow still busily at work. "Seems to me," he said, in his dry voice, after a little while, "you aren't much like other little girls." "Aren't I?" responded Carolyn May wonderingly,

"No. Most little girls that come here want shavings to play with," said the carpenter, quizzically eying her over his work,

"Oh!" cried Carolyn May, almost jumping. "And do you give 'em to em ?" "'Most always," admitted Mr. Par-

low. "Oh! Can I have some?" she gasped.

"All you want," said Mr. Parlow. When Tim's old hack crawled along the road from town with Aunty Rose sitting inside, enthroned amidst a multitude of bundles, Carolyn May was pedecked with a veritable wig of long, crisp curls.

"Well, child, you certainly have made a mess of yourself," said the house keeper. "Has she been annoying you, Jedidiah Parlow?"

"She's the only Stagg that ain't and
