

formed in the earlier years of my practice, as well as from knowledge since gathered, when I say that the physician does not, as a rule, get more than twenty-five to fifty cents a visit for lodge work. In many benefit societies the only real benefit derived by the members is the free medical attendance. Of course, many will say, we quite agree with you that the fees are too low and that the system is bad, but how are you going to prevent it? Have we ever, as a united profession, tried to amend it? Have we an organization sufficiently strong to attempt to cope with the difficulty? I think not. If these were the only questions to be dealt with it would be worth all the trouble of making a thorough organization. Then there are the general questions of fees, of ethics, and others of vital importance, about which we have few laws and few methods of enforcing the law.

It has been suggested that in future our meetings should be held only in those cities which are easily accessible to the majority of the members. We are afraid that if the meetings were thus held only in central places the Association would, to a certain extent, lose its national character. If, however, we met only in such cities or provinces as already possessed active local societies the same object would be attained. If the profession of any city or province has sufficient energy and enthusiasm to maintain an active local society there would be no danger of failure in case this body held its meetings in that city or province.

We may safely say that we have in this Dominion a profession not inferior in average ability and culture to that of any country in the world. The examination which was established some years ago by the Ontario Medical Council, and the methods of registration adopted by other provinces, have prevented to a large extent the entrance of inferior merit into the profession. We have thus a better average than would otherwise have been the case.

Is there that feeling of unity among medical men in this country which ought to exist? Is the enthusiasm for the study of science of medicine such as we would like to see? I may be wrong, but I sometimes think that in these points we are not on a par with those of many other countries.
