

STUDENTS AND STRAWBERRIES

Some 300 high-school students from Belleville, Ontario, are helping with the strawberry harvest at farms in Picton. The top photo shows preparations being made for picking; middle photo, pickers at work in the fields; bottom photo, the berries are sorted and boxed.

Many berries are sold as fresh fruit but much of the Canadian harvest goes to commercial processors to be frozen, canned or made into jams and jellies.

Last year, Canada's commercial strawberry crop was 22,959 tons.
