

ISSUE SET THREE
Issues	Why	What	How	Who
- Sustainable communities that include vital environmental and cultural elements, within the context of renewed federalism and respect for minority rights.	Peace, security and stability, through empowerment of previously marginalized regions (e.g. the Niger Delta) where environmental issues are linked to social and political empowerment. Why Canada? <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Environmental expertise, through public agencies and private sector companies. - Strong business interests linked to primary resource investment. - Strong NGO relationships with Nigerian environmental issues. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Pilot projects that create a "laboratory for learning" in environmental and social issues. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Capacity-building for communities, institutions, and international organizations. - Training and education by both Nigerian and Canadian resource people and institutions. - Participatory and formal research on local and national environmental issues. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Nigerian and Canadian research institutions and universities - Canadian and Nigerian private sector - Local and Canadian NGOs - Local CBOs in Nigeria
ISSUE SET FOUR
Issues	Why	What	How	Who
Building democratic legal and judicial institutions that respect the rule of law.	Key to sustaining the transition and building democracy. Why Canada? <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Experience in Haiti and elsewhere with military and police reform. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Prison reform. - Demilitarization and professionalization of the military. - Human rights institutions such as the Human Rights Commission and Ombudsman. - Media as a watch dog for corruption. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Training and capacity building by Canadians. - Financial support to NGOs to create watch dog agencies. - Codes of conduct for international commerce, trade and investment. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - DFAIT - Department of Defense - Canadian police and military - Legal professionals and experts in human rights law - Canadian NGOs with appropriate expertise e.g. Elizabeth Fry Society, John Howard Society, Canadian Centre for Victims of Torture, etc.