

Communist Activities in Canada

must legislate to stop this thing then by inference we suggest that the Canadian people are not intelligent enough to withstand the lure and indeed the guile of communism. I hope that the amendment will be most thoroughly defeated. I hope so for this reason, if for none other, that it is high time the world saw that in one part of North America at least there is still, if I may mix my metaphors, a beacon of sanity.

On motion of Mr. Macdonnell (Greenwood) the debate was adjourned.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. Fournier (Hull): Tomorrow we will continue this debate, hoping to reach a vote. As announced last night, two departments will be called, national health and welfare and post office. Then we would like to go into ways and means and have a vote on the amendment of the leader of the opposition. Then we will take up the budget resolutions.

At eleven o'clock the house adjourned, without question put, pursuant to standing order.
