The inscriptions and lettering on the stone had become almost obliterated in spots on account of the sandstone becoming disintegrated. The panels have now been covered with bronze plates bearing the original inscriptions, and also the names of the oronze plates bearing the original in-scriptions, and also the names of the soldiers who fell in the historic ac-tion at Lime Ridge. The marble statues and other sculpture work on the monument has been carefully cleaned, and as the fence has been re-paired and repainted the whole monument isn ow in a first-class state of repair, and presents a very good ap-
