WAR DECLARED BY GREAT BRITAIN SIX YEARS AGO TODAY

Memories of Stirring Times
Come To Whole Empire
On Anniversary.

Six years ago today at midnight Great Britain, following the example set by France, declared war on Germany, and the great struggle which lasted for over four years, was begun. Six years ago tonight London, the thousands of British reservists and local youths who have since made the supreme sacrifice in the front line, paraded the main streets here when patriotism through-out the British Empire was at fever heat. Several brass bands and members of the militia of this city also took part in the demonstrations, and within a few days recruiting for the First Canadian contingent was begun.

Following the declaration of war, nightly parades were a feature for London, the lads in khaki being cheered as they marched along, by many citizens who later took part in the titanic struggle; in fact, many young men wearing short trousers, followed the parade of the 1st Contingent Volunteers here, before peace was declared. They themselves signed up and proceeded overseas to join those whom they envied in 1914, and who were never returned from the fight. Thousands of other Londoners have come back safely after great work at the front.

To many Londoners the realization that six years have passed is difficult, their memory fresh with early wartime scenes here. But all over the world those whose names have been benefitted by a son or brother or both, six years ago today at midnight brought back happy memories of the peaceful days preceding the great war.

UNION BAKERS GET INCREASE IN WAGES

Agreement Signed Tuesday
Afternoon—Eliminates
Strike Possibility—
Men Satisfied.

At a meeting of a committee selected by the union bakers of this city, and a similar body delegated by local bakers held in the Labor Temple Tuesday afternoon, an agreement was signed granting the union men an increase in wages of 15 per cent more than that provided in last year's contract. Other conditions were identical with the former contract. The new agreement expires on May 1, 1921.

The union bakers were out for a closed shop, but this matter could not be settled amicably, and was therefore not pressed by them. The new contract signed yesterday eliminates any possibility of a strike. The union men being satisfied with the increase in wages granted by it, according to a statement made to The Advertiser last night by a member of the committee.
