

The Toronto World

A Morning Newspaper Published Every Day in the Year.
MAIN OFFICE, 33 YONGE STREET, TORONTO.

A favor will be conferred on the management if subscribers who receive papers by carrier or thru the mail will report any irregularity or delay in receipt of their copy.

Forward all complaints to The World Office, 33 Yonge Street, Toronto.

DUPLICITY IS THE GREAT PUBLIC ENEMY THESE DAYS.

The public power proposition needs a lot of clearing up at the present time.

An exact statement of the situation would be appreciated all round.

Will Adam Beck supply that statement?

Or better still will Premier Whitney do it? He was not sufficiently specific on Monday night. The people look to him because they begin to see that there never was a public proposition so antagonized by "interests" as this one is.

They think, for some reason or other, that there are men in the Whitney government, like Messrs. Hendrie and Hanna, who are not friendly to the proposition. Mr. Hendrie is also on the hydro-electric commission. There are other ministers who are sitting on an even keel in regard to it. Does anyone know where Mr. Foy is?

The enemies of the scheme have their agents everywhere—even behind sealed doors and sacred oaths.

There are men on the Niagara Falls Public Commission like Senator Robert Jaffray who are not friendly to the power proposition.

There are men in the Conservative ranks in the legislature like Herb. Lennox of North York who antagonize the policy at every secret turn.

There are a lot of Conservative M. P.'s in Toronto who antagonize it.

The Liberal party in so far as it is organized and has a leader in the Ontario legislature has been chloroformed on the question. The organ of that opposition, The Globe, antagonizes the policy by duplicity of conduct. What has Mr. MacKay to say about the events of the last few days?

There seems to be duplicity at every turn of this question, and it is the double-faced man that is trying to circumvent the policy of Whitney and Beck. He seems to be everywhere.

Surely Mr. Whitney must see this duplicity. The World sees it, and The World is not a rumor-monger. But The World would like to see light ahead. So would the people and the municipalities.

PERHAPS THE WHOLE BATTLE FOR PUBLIC OWNERSHIP OF NIAGARA POWER WILL HAVE TO BE FOUGHT OVER AGAIN IN THE COMING ELECTIONS. THE WORLD IS READY FOR THAT FIGHT, AND SO ARE THE PEOPLE. ALL WE WANT IS A LITTLE NOTICE.

The Province of Ontario can beat any combination in the world against it, but it must have open fighting to do it. And the next thing we want to impress on Mr. Whitney is that the sooner he gets busy on the job of building public transmission lines and supplying the municipalities with power at cost the sooner will he be doing what the people expect of him.

The greatest public enemy to-day is duplicity. That is what we want to press on Mr. Whitney.

NEW BRUNSWICK ELECTIONS.

New Brunswick has followed the lead given by Ontario three years ago and after a lengthy period of Liberal rule, or rather misrule, has transferred the conduct of its affairs to the hands of the opposition. The parallel holds good in other ways, since the long tenure of office enjoyed by the dominant party there, as here, ended, as is common, in the continued retention of office by methods politically corrupt and seriously detrimental to the public welfare. The collapse of the New Brunswick Government is another proof of the truth that, tho the punishment of political wrong-doing may be long delayed, it will come at last sharply and decisively.

Prolonged tenure of office in Canada has been productive of grave evils both in federal and provincial politics. In order to maintain themselves in power governments have resorted, not only to directly improper electoral methods, but to more insidious and equally demoralizing practice of using administrative patronage for the reward of support and the punishment of opposition. The fall of the Robinson cabinet is therefore of much more than local importance if it marks the revolt of the electorate themselves against the methods of the late and present manipulators of power for party purposes. And the lesson will not be lost if in future more frequent changes are made in the personnel of administrations, both federal and provincial. Restriction of office to a couple of terms at the most would greatly purify Canadian politics.

The New Brunswick elections will be accepted everywhere as an evidence of the waning fortunes of the Laurier government. It, too, will fall from its own misdeeds and internal weakness than thru assault from without. Not this last reversal alone, but other significant occurrences in unexpected places indicate that electors of independent mind are recognizing more clearly the folly of pinning their faith to political labels. No one can look at the record of the so-called Liberal Government of the Dominion without seeing that it is filled with the wreckage of all that the older and truer reform party of Canada held dear. Retribution lies at the door of those who to the cant add the recant of political principle.

BRITISH TRADE UNIONISM.

From the report on British trade unions for 1906 just issued by the chief registrar of Friendly Societies it is evident that this form of labor organization is steadily increasing in membership and strength. Returns were received from 645 unions with a membership of 1,719,031, an increase of 151,512 or 9.7 per cent. over that of the previous year. Their income for 1906 was roundly $13,500,000, an increase of $700,000, as against an expenditure of $11,400,000, or $1,100,000 less than that of 1905. The funds of these unions now reach the large total of $29,000,000, the leading societies being the Amalgamated Society of Engineers, whose funds are stated at $2,600,000; the Amalgamated Cotton Spinners with $2,400,000 and the Durham Miners with $1,850,000. Taking the returns for the decennial periods since 1888 makes the growth of British trade unionism even more remarkable—the membership having risen from 340,892 in that year to 1,106,507 in 1896, and to 1,719,031 in 1906, the corresponding income being $3,260,000, $8,940,000 and $13,500,000, and the funds $2,800,000, $11,200,000 and $29,000,000. The latest are record figures.

THE TUBERCULOSIS CONFERENCE.

This afternoon at 2 o'clock in the Royal Alexandra Theatre, the general-assembly will inaugurate the conference on tuberculosis convened on the initiative of the National Sanatorium Association. It should be unnecessary at this time of day and in northern latitudes to invite public attention to the ravages of the white plague. Indeed it touches the family and the individual very closely, and but for the fact that it has been so long associated with a resignation of hopelessness, the people would no doubt have proved more responsive in the past. But modern discovery and modern methods have brought with them words of cheer for the afflicted and for their friends. Those who have been in the shadow of death know that it can be lifted and it is the privilege as well as the duty of governments and of all who have the means to be philanthropic to bring relief to the sufferers who cannot without assistance renew their lease of life.

Ontario in many ways the most progressive of Canada's provinces has unfortunately lagged behind in this important matter of providing assistance for consumptive patients unable, or only partially able, to take advantage of the sanatoria which are found to be the most potent agencies in the cure of tuberculosis. These institutions are exceptionally costly because a generous diet is an essential part of the treatment, but the provincial government continues to class them with general hospitals, and only allows $140 per patient per week. In the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives the cost of maintenance for the year to Sept. 30, 1907, was $9.86, and the multiplication of sanatoria in the province is rendering it increasingly difficult to secure by voluntary subscription the amount required to cover absolutely necessary expenditure.

In these circumstances an additional grant from the provincial exchequer is urgently needed to make the government allowance at least $5, and as Premier Whitney and his cabinet are known to be in entire sympathy with the movement a little judicious pressure on the part of the legislature will no doubt secure the desired result. Other provinces and several states of the neighboring republic have made liberal grants, both for buildings and current expenses, and Ontario should at least emulate their example. This conference has been called together with the full knowledge and approval of the provincial government, and ought to leave valuable practical benefits in the shape of new and progressive legislation. Altho its deliberations are confined to delegates all ladies and gentlemen interested in them will be cordially welcomed as visitors, and it may be hoped the invitation will meet with a favorable response.

Fire at Reston, Man.

RESTON, Man., March 3.—(Special.)—Fire destroyed the Massey-Harris warehouse and contents this morning about 2 o'clock. Nothing was saved. Snow was falling and a volunteer bucket brigade saved Ireland's ivery and probably half the village. The loss is about six thousand, mostly insured.

While tobogganing in Riverdale Park, about 10 o'clock, Miss Patricia Inglewood House, Jarvis-street, was thrown from her sleigh and broke her arm.

EVERY Correct Requisite FOR "DRESS WEAR"

The new "V"-shape Dress Vest, in white, black, "Dinner" Vest, $1.50. English Dress Shirts, 14 in. to 17 in. each, $1.00. New Shape Collars, "Phoenix" brand, two for $1.25. Fine Black Cashmere Half Hose, reg. $4.00, for 40c. three pair for $1.25.

WREYFORD & CO., (JAEGER DEPOT) 85 King Street West.

SIMPLE ENOUGH

Continued From Page 1.

no persons holding shares in their own names or relatives or friends of such persons. . . . And while the newspapers have from time to time contained references to the suspension of the plaintiff bank, and to the causes thereof, and to the fact that this present action is pending against the defendants, no editorial or other expressions of opinion by newspapers relating to the civil responsibility of the defendants in this action has come to my attention and I am convinced that there is no excited state of public feeling or prejudice or animus prevailing against the defendants to interfere with a fair and impartial consideration of this action by a jury selected at a trial in this city.

I am advised and verily believe that the liability of any of the defendants in this action chiefly depends upon the question whether the defendants used ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men in the discharge of their duties as directors of the plaintiff bank, and that what is ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men is a question of fact to be decided by a jury considering the surrounding circumstances and the customs and practices of business men in the control of banking institutions, companies, limited or otherwise, and large commercial transactions.

The Sin of Omission.
"I am advised by counsel for the plaintiff and verily believe that whether defendants did or did not perform their duty to the bank in managing its affairs is a question upon which it will not be necessary to make any detailed or prolonged examination of the books of the bank or the proceedings of the directors' meetings. . . . but will in the main depend upon the omissions of the directors to provide certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much, if any, dispute, but it will be a question to be tried by a jury, whether such omissions were in respect of matters for which directors using ordinary or reasonable care or the exercise of the judgment of reasonable men ought to have provided certain safeguards and to certain things; and with reference to the fact of such omissions, there will not and cannot be much