

change took place in her condition and prospects we expressed our joy in language too strong perhaps for those who had rather that the main-spring of her advancement was of an inferior power.—Nor has our affection for Harbor Grace blinded us to the interests of the settlements around us; we always considered the Star to be the advocate of the entire Bay, to the exclusion of no community whatever, within its ample limits.

That the extensive and densely peopled Bay of Conception may continue in the road to wealth and importance is our unfeigned wish.—But to this end, the people themselves must be united; they must be obedient to the laws—constitutional in their movements;—industrious, FRUGAL, TEMPERATE. The merchant must be an example to the planter—the planter to the servant, and the authorities (whether lay or clerical) to all. By a strict attention to these things the Bay will go on to prosper; but if “every one shall do that which seemeth good in his own eyes” without regard to the laws of either God or man, the clouds of adversity will settle upon it; aye; and that too, in spite of all the glare and glitter which even the accumulated wealth of the universe could be made to produce.

With these sentiments, and with this brief and most imperfect expression of them, it is not without some considerable emotion that we bow and retire.

British Expedition to Syria. The blow is struck. We learn from our London correspondent that two thousand British troops have been ordered to Syria. Sir C. Smith is said to have the command. Major Gordon Higgins commands the artillery. The expedition sails from Gibraltar, and the troops composing it are to be drafted from Ireland! Our intelligence is positive, and may be relied on with the utmost confidence. Dublin Evening Mail.
