LADY CONSTANCE RICHARDSON HAS "TAKEN UP" THE STAGE.

Celebrated English Nob Whose Daring Eccentricities Have-Provided So Much Small Conver-sation in London Will Appear in a "Judith" Play—Will Go To Vienna

To Save Frends' Feelings.

That Lady Constance Stewart Bichardson, daughter of the Earl of Coomartie and niece of the Duke of Sutherland, who danced for charity in London drawing rooms a few years ago, is to make her appearance as a professional dancer on the stage of Vienna, comes as no particular shock to society in England at least. Somehow, Lady Constance always seems to be up to something quite eccentric and whimsical—to be going in for some "Sunt" incompatible with her position in aristocratic society. The drama in which she will have the lead-

LADY CONSTANCE RICHARDSON. ing role is entitled Judith and is based on an incident supposed to have taken place during the Maccabean wars, after which Judith becomes the wars, after which Jutin becomes and famous Jewish heroine. The perform-ance was originally intended for Lon-don, but objections were raised in high quarters, and to these Lady Condon, but operating were taken an high quarters, and to these Lady Constance gave way.

In a published interview Lady Constance is quoted as follows:

"I am one of the best swimmers in England, and also a first-rate salmon fisher, and, above all things, a hunt-ress. I have danced in aristocratic families with much success, and thus am seized with a desire to appear in public, but the very idea naturally shocked my relatives. In her swimming dress a high aristocratic lady may be seen in public. To that no-body objects but dancing in public, why, that would, in English opinion, be an outrage on society.

"That would mean compromising my family and would imply loss of favor with the royal family forever. All of that I had to consider, but I could not give up my pet idea. If I succeed in Vienna t may help me to overcome the prejudice of society in

One was a right thigh bone that had been broken, and was still held in position by a workmanlike splint and bandages. All the knots were true refanots, and the wrappings showed how the strips of palm-fibre cloth were set just as a good surgeon would set them nowedays, so as to use the full strength of the fabric.

In other cases, said Dr. Sandwith, bodies were found with compound fractures, where the broken ends of the bone had broken through the skin. Death seemed to have come very quickly after an accident of this kind, for no trace of healing of the bones was to be found. that had been set with bark splints

The PRESIDENT: I have the honor to present to the House a report which the Clerk of the Council has handed to me regarding the representation of the County of Annapolis, and which report the Clerk will now read.

The Clerk then read the report as follows: When the women in the Shan hills of Upper Burma want is a long neck. Beauty is estimated from the extended head pivot. From childhood the women wear tight rings of brass about the neck, and at the slightest relief from the strain another ring is added. Besides the rings around their necks, they wear heavy rings on their legs. THE HON. M. H. GOUDGE, President of the Legislative Council President of the Legislative Council.
Sir,—In compliance with the practice in this behalf, I have the honor to report for the information of the Legislative Council that, on examination of the Journals of the Legislative Council, they show that for two consecutive sessions, to wit, the last session of the Thirty-fourth General Assembly, and the first session of the Thirty-fifth General Assembly of the Province of Nova Scotia, the Honourable George Whitman, a member of the Legislative Council residing in the County of Annapolis, in the Province of Nova Scotia, was absent from his place therein and no consent in that behalf of the Governor-in-Council appears.

cently by a marriage celebrated by Rev. J. R. Bythell, incumbent of Holy Trinity Church.

It was a ceremony unique in the annals of Canadian church history and a tingle of more than ordinary interest was added to it by the principals, Mr. Charles Stewart Richmond, son of Rev. J. R. Richmond, of Gaspeller, Quebec, and Miss Sophia Mackenzie, a beautiful Indian girl who is claimed by her relatives to be a descendant of Sir Alexander Mackenzie, the discoverer of the Mackenzie River. It was about eleven years ago that Mr. Richmond, then but a lad, attracted by the call of the wild and the lure of the mining life, was one of the first whites to break a trail east of Hurricanaw. Blazing trails through the bush he found on a little unknown island a little Indian girl—deserted by a stepmother and left atone to face starvation and perhaps death. The child, as she was then, could not tell the tale of her suffering, but Mr. Richmond later learned that she had been on the island for four days without food and shelter and had subsisted on the wild berries she gathered.

Taking the child back to his little

Taking the child back to his little camp he tenderly nursed her back to health and between them there grew a love which without benefit of clergy took its natural course.

In the years that rolled away the stather and stepmother found out the could and claimed her. Well supplied with all the necessities of life, Mr. Richmond's generosity to the natives soon cemented their, friendship though and the tables was the ideath.

Richmond's generosity to the natives soon cemented their, friendship though, and the father gave his daughter in marriage to him.

The only ceremony attendant on the first union was a solemn promise exacted by the girl's father that as soon as they could get out of the bush to a point of civilization where there was a clergyman that the marriage would be performed in the legal way. When Mr. Richmond finally found that he could have the marriage performed according to his belief, he held his promise as sacred and with their his promise as sacred and with their children the pair set out for Cochrane.

From Keewagama Lake, Que., Mr. and Mrs. Richmond started over the trail for Cochrane. The father took the boy who was a year old in Decem the boy who was a year old in December, and the mother carried the infant girl, who was born to them last December. They packed it over an unfortand rail with their children's comfort and health their first thought, to the steel at Hurricanaw. There for the first time the little mother heard the clang of a train; from Hurricanaw in she enjoyed the first iurney that the clang of a train; from Hurricanaw, in she enjoyed the first journey that had not to be made on foot.

At the conclusion of the marriage Rev. Mr. Bythell baptized the children and the boy was called George Nolan and the girl Muriel Emma. Mrs., Richmond would easily pass for a white, but she prefers to be known as a squaw and is proud of her Indian blood.

as a squaw and is proud of her Indian blood.

Mr. Richmend has great expectations for the future of his wife and family. Highly educated himself, fairly well to do and of good family, it is his intention to send their children to his mother, to be educated under her supervision. He has five brothers elergymen and another brother engaged in silver and black fox raising but a short distance from his cabin at Keewagams Lake.

Leon Henley, an employe of the W. C. Edwards Co. Mills at Rockland, near Ottawa, has discovered that he is the holder of the ticket bearing the number advertised as winning first prize of $300,000 in a lottery conducted by the Government of France two years ago.

According to the story as told by Henley's friends, the French Government extensively advertised the result of the lottery. When none appeared to claim the big prise it was supposed that the holder of the winning number had gone down with the Titanio last year. Henley heard nothing of this till a few weeks ago when his attention was brought to an advertisement of the result. He gasped to find, on comparing the number of his ticket, that it corresponded with that entitled to the first prize; $300,000.

A RLOODLESS VICTORY.

How a British Merchant Captain Reputsed Malay Pirstes.

Johnnie Northwood, of whom Mr. J. D. Ross writes in "Skrty Years" Life and Adventures in the Far East," in the course of his long life had a great many thrilling adventures. None, however, had a happier conclusion than the following:—

His trading ship, the "Alastor," had been driven into unchartered waters off the Dewskan Island in the Malay Archipelago. It seemed impossible to get the ship out, for there were dangerous rocks and reefs on every side. To make matters worse, a fleet of proas approached, loaded to the gunwales with villainous looking Dewagans, who are noted for their piratical tastes.

After some preliminary parley, ac-ans, who are noted for their pirateal tastes.

After some preliminary parley, accompanied by earnest protestations of peace on the part of the natives, they ran their proas alongside the motionless steamer, and with surprising rapidity agrambled to her deck.

They were all armed. Some of them had old-fashioned pistols in their hands, weapons that carried a ball an inch in diameter, which at close range will knock a very large hole in a man's body.

Johnnie Northwood felt that he ought to take the offensive, but he did not find it easy to start the shooting. He had a heavy Colt revolver cocked in his hand. There, a few feet in front of him was a group of excited cocked in his hand. There, a few feet in front of him was a group of excited savages discussing something very eagerly in their own dialect—no doubt how they should start the fighting. What was easier than to raise his pistol and open fire on the men before him! Six shots would lay out six of them, and send the rest flying to their boats. But he could not do it; the thing was too much like murder and too little like fighting. The natives must begin the attack if there was to eone. Coming across McCracken, the control of the co dered him aft to what was to be the citade!

"Not me, sir!" said McCracken. "I shall be busy on the main deck! No, sir! I'm not goin' to direct a stream of b'ilin' water on them savages. But I'm going' to wash the deok wi' hot water, and if them pirates happen to get what I might call a fitbath, it'll no kill the scoundrels!"
"All right, McCracken, I understand. But be quick, or you will have those fellows on top of you!" So saying, Johnnie rushed to the poop, and chatching up his rifle, posted himself, so as to beat off an attack on McCracken.

Apparently the natives intended to tering and shouting had at last ceased, and something decisive seemed ed, and something decisive seemed about to happen, when suddenly a wave of boiling water went hissing along the port side of the main deck and washed in amongst the principal body of islanders. Horny as their naked feet were, the natives danced about in agony and threw themselves overboard in headlong panic.

"Noo, Sandy," shouted McCracken, "come along and we'll wash 'em off the starboard deck!" the starboard deck!"

The mere sight of the big Scotsman

The mere sight of the big Scotsman and his hose was quite enough for the marauders, who had witnessed the discomfiture of their comrades, and they promptly went overboard, yelling horribly as they dropped into their boats or into the sea. The Alastor was clear of the invaders.

Relieved of other trouble, the captain at last succeeded in feeling his way out to the open sea. Soon the Dewakan Island, with its treacherous reefs and piratical natives, was far astern.

The agony columns in the newspapers reveal many a story of blighted and troubled love. Almost every day some lovesick youth and maiden make the newspaper the medium for the outpourings of their hearts, and their messages often take the form of the most extravagant rhapsodies.

"Why, oh why cannot we look into "Why, oh, why, cannot we look into ach other's eyes?" frantically implorach other's eyes?" frantically implor-d an advertiser in one of the London dailies recently, addressing one "Fifi."
'I suffer every moment we are parted.
Do break the silence and let us meet.

Do break the silence and let us meet.

—Your own Jackie."

Even this, however, was not quite so extravagant in style as that of a romantic "Romeo" who thus addressed his divinity through the medium of a prominent provincial paper. "Last night I looked at your last letter. Thanks, thanks, my soul, my queen, my star, I think of the future and tremble with dread. My heart beats in unison with yours. If we beats in unison with yours. If we never meet again, dear one—no, that never meet again, dear behold again your beauteous counten-ance. Until then, desolation and misery is mine.
