STRICKEN ARMENIA.

A Noble Response to the Appeal of Frederickton W. C. T. U.

What the Women of New Brunswick in General Have Done

For the Persecuted, Helpless and Suffering Women and Children of Armenia

A Labor of Love.

The Women's Christian Temperance Union of Frederickton appeals to the women of New Brunswick in general on behalf of the persecuted, helpless and suffering women and children of Armenia.

It is with heartfelt sorrow and deepest sympathy we have heard of the anguish of our fellow Christians in Armenia, and we express our sincere admiration of their dauntless courage and faithfulness in their bitter suffering.

We rejoice that agencies are at work in the province for their relief, but we appeal to you to help us raise a special women's Armenian relief fund, and to forward that and we ask of each woman and girl in New Brunswick the minimum sum of five (5) cents.

We also ask the co-operation of the local unions and women's societies throughout the province in collecting and forwarding the sums donated.

HAZEN AND CHESLEY

Are the Liberal Conservative Standard Bearers in the Coming Campaign.

The Convention Thursday Night Was Very Large and Represented all Parts of the City and County.

The Candidates Greeted With Enthusiastic Applause as They Responded to the Call of the Gathering.

The liberal conservative convention of the city and county of St. John met, pursuant to call, at Foster's cor., Thursday night, to select two candidates to contest the St. John constituencies at the coming general election. The attendance was very large, and the proceedings were marked by the utmost good nature, harmony and enthusiasm.

On motion, Wm. Shaw, M. P. P., was chosen chairman, and J. Twining, secretary.

The roll of delegates was then called, and those present answered to their names. Wherever vacancies occurred they were filled by duly accredited substitutes.

Those who responded to the call were:

TRIED TO KILL HIS WIFE.

Edward K. Bethel Attempts to Shoot Dallas Tyler of the W. H. Crane Co.

Hartford, Conn., April 29.-Edward K. Bethel, a member of the Hoodman Band company, now playing at the Grand Opera house, Boston, attempted to shoot his wife, a member of the William H. Crane Co., in this city, at the Hotel Heublein late this afternoon. Five shots were fired, but none of them took effect. Bethel is now under arrest at the police station, charged with assault and attempt to kill.

BZZELZ FOUND GUILTY.

Portland, Me., April 29.-John and Leslie Buzzelz of Presque Isle were tried in the United States court today for smuggling one hundred pounds of Paris green into the United States from Clearwater, Canada. The smuggling was discovered by a man named Phillips, who sold the Paris green, sending Attorney Shackford, who was also deputy collector for Blaine, the bill for the collection. The jury found the brothers guilty after being out half an hour. They will be sentenced tomorrow.

BZZLE GETS OFF WELL.

Portland, Me., April 30.-John Buzzelz of Presque Isle, convicted of smuggling Paris green into the United States from Canada, was sentenced to pay a fine of $20 and costs and was committed to Portland jail for one day. Leslie Buzzelz, his brother, was discharged. The jury were finally excused at 10:30.

The nominations for the city of St. John were as follows: A. J. Armstrong by Major Gordon; John A. Chesley by Dr. William Christie, and George Robertson by Andrew Hunter. The vote resulted as follows:

Total ballots cast 150 Destroyed 148 Necessary for a choice 75

On motion the nominations of Mr. Hazen and Mr. Chesley were made unanimous.

J. D. Hazen, who was greeted with three ringing cheers as he mounted the platform, said it was with the greatest possible pleasure that he accepted the nomination for the city and county of St. John, appreciating, as he did the great honor thus extended to him by the largest and most representative convention of the party ever held in this constituency.

While accepting the nomination thus tendered to him, he begged to assure the convention that had his friend Mr. Hazen or any other conservative received the majority of their ballots, he would have given him his hearty support, and would have done every thing in his power to secure his election to the honor of commons. (Cheers.) This was a most representative convention of the liberal conservative party, representing not only the best of the party, but every shade of party thought, and the honor it had done him was without personal solicitation on his part.

Although he felt that this man and that man was opposed to him, he had not asked a single delegate for a vote, as he felt that they were all animated by one feeling, to choose the man they believed who would most faithfully and accurately represent liberal conservative principles, and whatever their choice might be, he would cheerfully abide by it.

When unexpectedly nominated in 1871, he hesitated, he felt first, that he would be loyal to the party that had put him forward, and second, that he would be true in all places and in all times of the interests of St. John. He believed that the large vote he had received tonight was due to the fact that he had lived up to those pledges. Lord Dufferin, speaking on one occasion at Belfast, said that allegiance to party was the duty of every man, and that party had animated him (Hazen) in all his political acts.

It had been admitted by his opponents as well as by his friends that he had been a loyal St. John, and so long as he possessed the confidence of the elector, he would do his very best for the city in which he lived and in which he expected to spend his days.

Every year since he had been elected, he had raised his voice in parliament in behalf of St. John, and last year, Mr. Chesley, who had gone to Ottawa and there, despite the strong influence of the Grand Trunk and other forces, they succeeded in securing a subsidy for the Beaver line, which enterprise meant, among other things, the distribution of one hundred thousand dollars, chiefly among the working men of St. John. They had since then secured a pledge from the government that the Beaver line would be continued next winter, and which pledge that the claims of St. John would not be overlooked in connection with the proposed new line of steamer between Prince Edward Island and Canada.

Another matter which he had bestirred himself was the management of the Intercolonial railway in relation to the business men of St. John. For three seasons he had pointed out the evils of having the management so far removed from the centre of the road, and he, aided by the many members, finally succeeded in getting the management placed in the hands of the chief superintendents of the road, thus largely removing the cause of complaint.

Mr. Hazen said he did not believe the people of the maritime provinces were prepared to accept the rule of the liberal party - a party led by such a man as Sir Richard Cartwright, who called our section of the country patches of the dominion and Nova Scotia in the bitterest terms; by John Charlton, who wanted to close up the L. C. R.; and contained in his front ranks Commodore Welch, who sold the Bay of Fundy was unfit for navigation, and Mr. Bowers of Digby, who pronounced it the foggiest place in the world. These statements were made by these gentlemen on the floors of the house when he and his colleagues were urging the claims of St. John as the winter port. He felt that in nominating Mr. Ellis the liberal party had been true to its traditions, as when other men were proposing St. John's claims, he had opposed the construction of the C. P. R. and thrown cold water on the short line, yet unless the government had built these roads it would have been impossible for St. John to become a winter port for Upper Canada. He challenged Mr. Ellis to show that he had done anything for St. John while in the federal parliament or in the local legislature, where he was a supporter of the government of the day, and comparing the liberal candidate's public record with his own and Mr. Chesley's, left it to the people, irrespective of party, to say in whose hands their interests would be most safe. Referring to his opponent that Col. Tucker, who had hitherto taken no interest in its public affairs, should now aspire to a seat in parliament, Mr. Hazen then briefly dis-cusssed the trade and fiscal record of the liberal party, saying that no man had determined that the party banner proceeded to hand the party over to Boss McShane, the notorious Tarle, Prefontaine, Pacaud and kindred unclean spirits. The issue at the coming election, said the speaker, is a broad one, and the party meant was going to the country on its policy of building up Canada for Canadians. As a party that policy they had determined that the business of Canada in summer as well as winter should henceforth be done through Canadian ports, and he and Mr. Chesley had secured the government's promise that the subsidy to the Allan line would be discontinued unless they dropped Portland, Maine, and ran directly between Canada and Great Britain. He felt assured that a large part of that subsidy would be paid for mails handled via the port of St. John next winter. (Applause.) He closed with a fervent appeal to the conservatives to do their duty in the coming contest, and promised that on his re-election he would continue to do all that he could to further the interests of this constituency. (Prolonged applause.)

John A. Chesley, who had received with hearty cheers, returned his warmest thanks for this expression of the confidence of the liberal conservative party, and predicted that along with his friend Mr. Hazen, he would come out victorious. He advised the party to pay no attention to the beautiful telegrams with which the liberal party of Ottawa was flooding the country, as they were for the most part utterly without foundation. This was part and parcel of the liberal tactics at every election, and the stories they were sending out now were but a mere repetition of what they had stated time and time again, and which the result at the polls had demonstrated to be pure and simple campaign fiction. He urged the liberal conservative party in St. John to close up its ranks, to work with a united front and victory would be theirs. He was confident that the people of Canada would not have over their destinies, the control of a party that had no fixed territorial base, but relied on appeals to sectional and racial prejudices for success and looked to Washington for the sign by which they might be guided. He once more heartily thanked the convention for its mark of renewed confidence and said he was going into the contest confident of victory. (Loud cheers.)

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. Shaw, who made a happy reply, and the proceedings ended with cheers for the Queen, the candidates, etc.

ANNAPOLIS ROYAL.

Death of Miss Effie Howe, Only Daughter of Judge Savary.

Entered into rest, April 28th, at Annapolis Royal, N. S., after an illness of fourteen months, of chronic disease of the lungs, following a attack of pneumonia, Effie Howe, only daughter of Judge A. W. and the late Jennie C. Savary, and only grand-daughter of Henry F. Ody of St. John, aged seventeen years and nearly three months. The deceased was by nature gifted in poetry and painting, and bade fair to become an ornament to society. As time passed on, the Christian graces shone in her character with an ever increasing vividness and lustre. Loosing at a tender age a mother whose name will long awaken loving memories in hundreds of St. John hearts, it became later her happy lot to enjoy the wise and loving care and counsels of another, whom she loved with all the ardor of a fourteen months' illness, and whose supreme maternal devotion and untiring attention, by God's blessing, not only prolonged her days after the shadow of a mortal disease had fallen on them, but, as if an angel's ministry, pointed her to the better life beyond, which she awaited in calm, unclouded confidence and holy joy, until it pleased her Divine Master to call her hence. The following lines were written by her while in extreme physical weakness and the almost immediate prospect of death:

Let me go, for the day breaketh, And the night, pale to dawn's shining - shining on the golden shore.

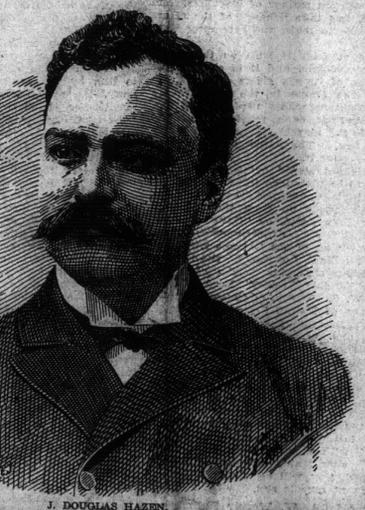

Let me go, for o'er the river, See! The bright and morning star Lighteth up the path to heaven, Brightly beaming from afar.

Let me go, for the day breaketh, And the shadow has away; Oh! I sail would see the glory of our eternal day.

In proportion to their number there are as many churches, robbed every year by burglars and sneak thieves in New York city as private residences.

The cathedrals ray having become a chestnut, it is once more true that there is nothing new under the sun.

The following is a good parrot story: A parrot in a certain house was usually kept in the dining-room with the family, but during the winter was removed to the kitchen for greater warmth. When the winter was past it again made its appearance among the family, whom it amused with the new remarks it had picked up in the kitchen. On one occasion, when the bell had been rung for something, the parrot was heard remarking from his cage: "Let 'em ring again!"
