

The accused did nothing more to me.

K. Evans

When the 2 soldiers entered the house they were standing at the front door and the blonde soldier sent me to the kitchen. When we saw the soldiers through the window I put on a morning coat and went to the kitchen, when I heard their come in. They were in the first room inside the door (the entrance hall).

I asked the blonde soldier to shoot me while I was in the room because I was afraid he would not kill me outright. The papers told us that soldiers have threatened women with napars. This made me afraid. It was for this reason that I was afraid on 4 May.

I never tried to run away when the soldiers came. Soldiers had searched the house before.

I did not help the accused in punishment, but did not try to prevent it because his pistol was on the table. He had threatened me several times with his napar. I thought he would kill me after the rape. I was surprised when he did not kill me. Later I begged him not to shoot me.

Reagan

My mother and I were right in front of the door when the soldiers came in. My father was still outside.