Some of the fish which they found in it were good, and these they gathered into baskets to keep; but the bad ones were thrown away. Lesson Story

"Billy Tyrrel has everything a boy could wish for", pouted James Bryson. "Billy gets nothing until he has earned it, I've heard", answered James' mother, "and that means hard work."

James and Billy soon got to be good friends, and James found that his mother was right. There was no pony and cart, if Billy had been heard to use a cross, angry word; there was no playing with the cricket set, if there was any quarreling beforehand. "Billy loves his grandfather, even if things are hard", James confided to his mother. "Billy is not the only boy who is better for the hard things", smiled mother, "his good example has helped another little boy I know."
