BABY TUCKER'S WONDERFUL CURE

Covered from Head to Foot with Humours - Forty Boils on Head at One Time-Could Not Shut Eyes to Sleep-Doctors Did No Good.

CURED BY CUTICURA IN ONE MONTH

Mrs. George H. Tucker, Jr., 335 Greenfield Avenue, Milwaukee, Wis., is a grateful mother. "When six months old," she says, "my little girl weighed a pound and a half less than at birth. When one month old a scab formed on her face, spreading until it completely covered her from head to foot, followed by boils, having forty on her head at one time, and more on her body. Then her skin started to dry up, and it became so bad she could not shut her eyes to sleep. One month's treatment with Cuticura Soap and Ointment made a complete cure, and now my child is as large, strong, and healthy as any child of her age. The doctor's and drug bills amounted to a large sum, and my baby grew worse all the time. Then we got Cuticura Soap and Ointment and cured her at trifling expense."

Is it true that some parts of Canada are over-served by the matter of news-papers? For instance, have British Col-umbia, with its population of 200,000, app a Manitoba, with its population of 350,000, got too many newspapers? Miranda's Whims

By A. M. DAVIES OGDEN

Copyright, 1905, by 4. 18 3. Orden

It was afternoon on one of the last few hot days of summer. Through the open windows came glimpses of greenwood bespeaking a delicious coolness and the ripple of brooks, but in the schoolroom the air was undeniably close. The scratch of a pencil, the shuffling of impatient little feet, the drone of a lazy bee, all seemed to intensify the impression of heat, and the young schoolmaster stirred restlessly. It had meant a great deal to Peter

Raymond, securing the village school at Wimberly, but he had not found his task an easy one. His eyes, wandering over the rows of bent heads before him encountered the glance of a girl seated near the door. The girl, one of the older scholars, with a toss of her curls. returned to her book, and the trouble in the schoolmaster's face deepened. Here was the crux of the situation. If he could win Miranda Hemming to his side the remainder of the pupils would follow easily enough. But it was Miranda herself, with her great blue eyes, fetching dimples and coquettish ways, who openly led the revolt against him The teacher sighed again. Perhaps he was too young. From the very beginning of his work, however, Raymond had recognized the primitive instinct of hostility to the unknown in the questioning eyes uplifted to his own. Now, after five weeks, he seemed no nearer the solution of his problem; indeed, matters under Miranda's spirited guidance were becoming even worse, despite his pointed ignoring of her mutiny. He touched the bell. "First class in grammar," he said. Miranda, with several other girls, ranging from sixteen to eighteen, came slowly forward. It was rather a trying recitation. Most of the girls stum bled. Miranda failed utterly, nor did she care. To all his questions she answered with provoking nonchalance, evidently indifferent as to whether he were pleased or not. Her rebellion had never before been quite so openly manifest. A sudden line of resolution tightened the young man's mouth.

"You may return to your seats," he "Miss Miranda, I shall expect you to remain after school until that esson is recited perfectly."

"What!" cried the girl. Involuntarily she fell back a step, hardly believing her own ears. That any one should dare address her, Miranda Hemming, in such fashion! Raymond's expression did not change.

"You heard what I said," he returned quietly. "It should not take long." For a mon ent Miranda, stupefied hesitated, then she flounced indignantly back to her seat. The whole school, which had dropped all work to listen to the passage at arms between Miranda and the teacher, fairly shivered, and Tom Carruthers, a big, loutish chap of nineteen, shot a sullen look at Raymond. To scold Miranda! To the quivering excitement of the school, the time until 4 o'clock appeared fairly to Would teacher really keep in Mi-when the others arose, Miranda also sprang to her feet. Then something in the teacher's expression caused her to sink back in her seat, tingling and abashed. It took an unusually long time for the pupils to disperse that day, but at last they were all gone. "You need not think that I shall study that lesson," she declared with sharp emphasis. Raymond nodded. 'As you please," he answered, "Only here we both stay until you do." "And I'm not to have any supper?

"Not until you learn that lesson." "But"- burst out Miranda furious ly. Then she closed her lips with a snap and leaned back, her hands tempestuously folded before her. Raymond picked up a book.

"Take your own time," he said pleas-

But somehow the book did not prove very enthralling. Between his eyes and the printed pages persisted the vision of a willful little face set in its tangle of wavy hair. Yet he must not be beaten now. His whole future hung on this issue, he thought. The shadows lengthened, the sun dropped behind the hills. Miranda, who for some time had been stealing furtive glances at the quiet figure behind the big desk smiled prettily. "I'm-I'm hungry," she wheedled.

For an instant Raymond wavered. This new sweetness was strange and alluring. But before he could speak the door was flung open and Tom Carruthers appeared on the threshold. "Ben't ye comin' home to supper, Mirandy?" he demanded. "Yer ma sent me fer ye," darting a suspicious look at her jailer. "Ain't ye comin'? I'll look out fer ye." "Why," began Miranda feebly. Ray-mond, a sudden, unaccountable resentment surging into his heart, frowned.

"Miss Miranda is in no need of a champion," he declared stiffly. "She can leave when she chooses. You may go." And Tom, after an instant's scowling hesitation, went out, banging the door. Miranda bit her lip. "I will never learn that lesson," she repeated stubbornly.

There was another long silence while the shadows darkened. At last the young man rose and lit the lamp. "It is nearly 9 o'clock," he said briefly. Miranda, now close upon tears, looked back still deflant. "And if I say it you'll let me go?"

flung the text at him, not pausing for question or comment. And then-"I--I hate you," she cried vehement ly; "hate you, hate you! And I'll nev-er, never come into this horrid school-room again!" The bright drops shone in her eyes like dew on forgetmenots her cheeks were flushed to a wild rose pink; the girl was shaken, puzzled hurt. The village boys she had teased and ruled at will. For the first time she had found a man impervious alike to her anger or smiles. From the day that he, a stranger, had met her eyes in calm unconcern she had uncon-sciously resented the fact. Now the repressed wrath of weeks found vent.

"I hate you," she reiterated stormily. The next moment she had flashed through the door and was gone. Raymond, oddly depressed in spite of his victory, followed slowly.

The world was flooded with the tranquil glory of the moonlight as he went out. A narrow path led to the road where a row of maples lifted their leafy branches to the starry skies, and Raymond, fancying that he caught the gleam of a white dress there under the trees, felt his heartbeats quicken. Somehow he had been looking forward to walking home with the girl. Then as he turned from locking the door a dark figure rushed by the corner of the schoolhouse, there was a woman's shrill scream, something heavy struck his forehead, and Raymond fell.

It must have been nearly an hour later when Raymond and Miranda stopped at the gate of the girl's home. Hearing footsteps, Mrs. Hemming came out to meet them.

"Well," she said. "So I hear you've been having trouble with Mirandy. Tom was here in quite a state and wanted me to interfere. But I judged you knew how to run your own game," comfortably. "Did ye meet him?" Raymond, feeling the bump left by the stone on his forehead, laughed.

"Yes, we met him," he said whim-sically. "And he left us in no doubt as to his opinion of me. Indeed, I might say that he left a decided impression. If it had not been that Miranda, sus pecting there might be trouble, waited- But, after all, I do not know that I blame him much," he went on "He could not appreciate that I was acting in Miranda's best interests," with mischievous emphasis. Miranda, very shy and conscious, flushed. Mrs. Hemming lifted her-hands.

"What ever am I going to do with that girl?" she ejaculated. "Really, she's growing fairly unmanageable. If she only had a father!" The young man became suddenly quite grave. "Will you intrust the task to me Mrs. Hemming?" he asked. "I think I understand her better now."

"Trust you," cried Mrs. Hemming.
"Why, ye're nothing but a boy yourself. How could you be a father to her?" regarding him in perplexed astonishment. Raymond bent and possessed himself of the girl's slender

"No, I suspect that I couldn't be father to her," he agreed, "but she has just promised to marry me."

Mezzofanti's Memory. Cardinal Mezzofanti had a memory little short of miraculous. Dr. Russell, his biographer, says that the cardinal spoke with the greatest ease thirty languages, that he spoke fairly well nine, that he used occasionally, but not with fluency, eleven more; that he spoke imperfectly eight and that he could read eleven more. Taking, in addition, the number of dialects he used, some so diverse from the mother tongue as to constitute a different language, Dr. Russell says that the cardinal was master of no less than 111 different languages and dialects. His German was so excellent that he was taken for and English were equally pure. Dr. Tholuck heard him converse in German, Arabic, Spanish, Flemish, English, Latin, Greek, Swedish and Por tuguese at one of the pope's receptions, and afterward Mezzofanti gave him an original poem in Persian and left him

Climate and Consonants. In a book on his-adventures in Tibet Colonel L. A. Waddell writes: "One curious result of the cold should be mentioned here-namely, its effect upon the speech of the people. A peculiarity of the language of the Tibetans, in common with the Russians and most arctic nations, is the remarkably few vowels in their words and the extraor dinarily large number of consonants For example, the Tibetan name for Sikhim is Hbrasljongs. Indeed, so ful of consonants are Tibetan words that most of them could be articulated with almost semiclosed mouth, evidently from the enforced necessity to keep the lips closed as far as possible against the cutting cold when speaking."

Skulls of Dead Indians

What is probably the site of an old ndian burying ground was revealed few days ago when excavating a mound in the C. P. R. station yard at Myrtis, Ont., on the Toronto & Havelock div-sion. The discovery was made by Contractor John Bescomb's staff. The ploughs used in reducing the mound uncovered ribs and leg bones, and soon sixteen skulls were upturned. Three of skulls were sent to Ottawa for cientific examination, and one to Dr. Clendennan at Toronto Junction. Seven. were retained by a liveryman at Myrtle, but they were stolen from his stable the same night.

New System of Checking

The general baggage agents who were recently in session at Cleveland discussed an innovation on baggage checking that will be of great benefit to the traveler. It is proposed to check dence to the destination at the terminal point. If the railroads in Canada and the United States agree to the pro-position it will be put into operation next year.
