THE ACADIAN

WOLFVILLE, N. S., FEB. 27, 1891.

Local and Provincial.

Vote as you pray.

Dr Young, the American Consul at Windsor, is spending his winter vacation in Wolfville.

Mrs J. W. Churchill, of Hantsport, who has been staying at the American House for a few weeks, left for home on Saturday last.

The annual meeting of the Wolfville branch of the S. P. C. is to be held in the Presbyterian vestry this evening at 7:30 o'clock.

A. C. Kempton, of Acadia College, recently left for Cleveland, Ohio, as a representative of the Y. M. C. A., at a convention to be held in that place.

On Sunday, March 1st, there will be morning service at 11 o'clock, with celebration of the Holy Communion, in St John's church. The Rector hopes to take this service himself.

The Athenaeum Society of the College held an "at home" in College Hall last Friday evening. One who was fortunate enough to have had a "bid" informs us that an enjoyable evening was spent by the large number present.

We would direct the attention of our readers to the adv. of Mr J. D. Chambers in another column. Owing to his removal from Wolfville Mr Chambers will sell his household furniture at public auction on Tuesday next.

Owing to the disagreeable state of the weather on Wednesday evening the carnival in the Wolfville rink has been postponed till Monday next, March 2nd, when a good time may be expected. The Avon band will be in attendance.

Mr John Russell, one of our former residents, is, we are glad to learn, prospering in Vancouver, B. C. One of his sons has recently come east to attend Acadia Villa Seminary. He was in Wolfville last week visiting his friends.

As Mr Geo. C. Johnson, of this place, was hauling mud from the marsh one day last week, his team became frightened and on Mr Johnson trying to stop it his ankle came in contact with the sled causing considerable injury, which has kept him in the house since. We hope to see him around again soon.

Mr James H. Hill, the popular boot and shoe maker of Kentville, has just completed the contract for making a pair of boots, the dimensions of which are as follows: Size, No. 15; length of sole, inside, 13 1/2 inches, outside, 14 1/2 inches. They are to be worn by Ebenezer Land say, Pine Woods, and be careful he doesn't step on you.

The friends of Rev. M. P. Freeman at Newtonville and vicinity made him a donation visit on the 18th inst., at the house of Mrs Daniel Coldwell. About 50 persons were present and the evening was very enjoyable. Mr Edward Coldwell announced, on presentation of the purse, that $25.00 in cash and useful articles had been realized.

Mrs Jack, of Halifax, who has been spending the winter here, recently left for South Carolina, where she will remain for a few months. She will be accompanied by her uncle, Prof. Elder, and family. We regret to learn that Prof. Elder is in failing health and has been advised by his physician to seek rest and recuperation in the sunny south. The authorities at Colby have granted him leave of absence.

A game of hockey was played in Wolfville on Saturday last, between a picked nine of Windsor boys and a club from Acadia Villa school. The game from the beginning was disputed and continued so all through. It seems that the dispute arose from the Windsor boys putting on a better man than any in their club and contrary to the agreement, also playing off side and the partially shown by the referee. The visiting team was beaten three to one. AN EYE WITNESS.

Mr John Grierson, of Halifax, corresponding secretary of the Nova Scotia Sabbath school Association, intends visiting the Port Williams Sabbath school on Sunday next, and on Monday at 3 o'clock p. m. will give a talk to Sabbath school teachers with a black-board lesson. In the evening he will give a magic lantern illustration, with views of Old and New Testament teachings. Teachers and others interested are cordially invited. A silver collection will be asked for, to be in Sabbath-school work.

Handbook Items.

Politics, in Handbook, is still the chief topic of conversation and likely to be for some time yet. Saturday afternoon I took a stroll down to Grimes' store. I knew if there was any information to be had concerning politics, that would be the place to get it. Grimes' store is the political centre of Handcock. People meet here from far and near to discuss it and many are the arguments raised concerning the great political issues of the day. As I went in, there was quite a crowd sitting around the stove and among the number was Deacon Klum. The subject under consideration was free trade.

"There's no doubt about it," said the Deacon, "free trade's just the country needs. I've allers argued so. Things is high enough, the dear knows, without havin' to pay a big duty on 'em. It may be all right to protect the manufacturers, but the farmer shouldn't pay for it."

"That's what I say," said young Eb Jones, "what this country wants is free trade and we're goin' to get it too. The idea of us havin' to pay duties just so the Canadian manufacturers can make money. It may be all right for up there in Upper Canada, but it's not fair for the farmer down here in Nova Scotia to suffer. What do you say, Mr Grimes?"

Mr Grimes allowed them to have his sentiments. He always had voted for free trade, that is on things we have to get from the States, and he was always going to "But," says he, "there's one thing about this election I dunno—this unrestricted reciprocity. Suppose we get unrestricted reciprocity with the United States. Of course we'll have to have the same duty on goods comin' from England and other countries as them or else if there was a lower duty in our country than the others all the goods comin' from foreign countries would pass through it. The United States wouldn't be of course let all the goods come through Canada and we wouldn't be satisfied to have them all pass through the United States—scarcely. Then the question is who would say what the duty was to be. Of course both countries would have a say in the matter, the United States having ten times as many people would have the whole control of it, and we'd have to shove our duties on English goods up as high as theirs. Then if the United States controlled our trade it wouldn't be long before they controlled everything else. No, I don't believe in this unrestricted reciprocity. The Loyalists didn't leave their homes in New England and come over here to have their descendants turn traitors and go back—oh least, mine didn't."

"Is that the policy of the Liberal party this time?" said Deacon Klum. "To tell the truth that doesn't look altogether right—to shut out the home country and have free trade with a foreign power."

"Oh," said Eb Jones, "that's just a political dodge like repeal. They'll be no change, I don't imagine, if they're elected. It's just a dodge to put 'em in power, and it'll do it, too, see if it don't."

"Wall," said Mr Grimes, "I don't think they'll get me again. They fooled me on repeal, but they won't on unrestricted reciprocity. I don't believe in these political dodges. If a party fools me once it'll be the last time. The way things look to me is that the Tories have adopted the old Liberal policy of reciprocity and the Liberals have acted the fool and taken up unrestricted reciprocity, or annexation, which is the same thing, you'll see, in the end. If Blake was at the head of the party there'd be no tomfoolery of this kind, and I'd be one that'd support him; but as it is I think I'll vote on the Tory ticket and run no risk. When I want to join the Yankees I'll pack up and go there, but I'll not consent to give up the old soil that our fathers fought for."

"Eb didn't know what to say. He was as mad as a hornet. I poked him in the ribs and laid back and laughed till I fairly raised the roof off the shop. 'Mr Grimes,' said I, when I had recovered myself, 'good for you! In the future you can always depend on my patronage' and diving deep into a box of confectionery on the counter, I finally bade him good-bye and left for home."
