The Little Country Paper.
When the evening shade is falling at the end of the day, an' a feller roots (from labor) smoking at his pipe of clay, there's nothing does him so much good, as to take up an' read the little country paper from his home town.
It ain't a thing of beauty an' its print ain't so very clear, but it straightens out his temper when a feller's feeling mean.
It takes the wrinkles off his face an' breaks off the frown.
That little country paper from his home town.
Now I like to read the dailies an' the story papers, too. An' if times the paper wets and some other body takes it, I want that little paper from my home town.

The Earthquake.

Quite a heavy shock of earthquake felt early on Monday morning at Wolfville, but reports from elsewhere to the fact that it was comparatively here. About two o'clock in the morning a number of householders were awakened by the shaking of their houses and the rattling of pipes, chandeliers and other fixtures. No damage has so far been reported from any locality where it was felt. A Boston despatch says that "beginning at St. John, N. B., the seismic vibrations traversed through the state of Maine, causing some damage to buildings in Augusta, Portland and Bangor. The shock was felt plainly as far south as Taunton."
Harvard officials say that the shock was the most severe since 1884. From Augusta, Portland, Waterville, Lewiston and Brunswick in the state of Maine, similar reports have been received, and in Manchester, N. H., the shock was quite severe. The time given scarcely varies, 5 to 10 minutes past two o'clock in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick and about the same time past one o'clock—the difference in time—in New England. At Fredericton, N. B., it seems to have been most plainly felt although nothing worse than shaken buildings and broken bric-a-brac has been reported. The shock lasted about fifteen seconds and is considered the most severe ever felt here.
