The Englishman.

Born in the East and bred in the West, Some of us harbor still A New World pride, and we boast of it. The spirit of Yankee Doodle. We claim our place as a separate race. Or a self-created class. 'Till there comes a day when we like to say 'We are kin of the Englishman.'

For under the front that looks so cold, And the voice that is wont to stern, We are certain to find a big, broad mind And a heart that is soft and warm.

And they carry their wares in a body way, As only the great South can.

And it makes us glad, when the truth we see, 'We are kin of the Englishman.'

He stands his door in the face of the world, If he thinks the world too bold.

He was slow to give to women the vote, And slow to give to men the hour of doom, And slow to give to the Englishman, (Written on board the Olympic April 4, 1912, after the Titanic disaster.)

Buying the Winter Clothes.

'What are you doing?' asked one woman of another as they met downtown.

'Buying my winter clothes,' she said. 'Don't you hate it?'

'It struck me that for a woman who had little to do and a not too limited income, it was a rather pleasant occupation. It is the woman who is rushed with a hundred other urgent tasks who finds the fall shopping burdensome.'

There is the woman for instance who has several children, and who by dint of much skrimishing and hustling and leaving of things undone finally closes the front door behind her, the baby asleep at last, the other youngsters weighted with instructions, and departs for an hour's visit to the shops.

What does she buy in that time? First, the absolutely necessary stockings and gloves for the family all around, sweaters and caps for the boys, cloth for school dresses and Sunday dresses for the girls, the little dresser who comes in by the day will make up. Buttons and trimmings must be got to match those a warm coat and bonnet must be bought for the baby, these things mean trips to many counters and probably many stores will be the result of only one trip. There must be several such expeditions before the family is safely launched into winter.

And she is not the only one who has to hunt for her own hat and suit, and must bring the children in cars to have their hats and coats and caps fitted, and all this with never a word about the home requirements. Fall shopping is no small undertaking for the woman with a family of little ones, even if she have plenty of money.

Of course the woman who can afford not to wear her mistakes has the easiest time of it. She goes into the sooty carpeted dress making establishment there is no excitement, no noise, no rush nor hurry of feet; the hum of the sewing machine is far from that calm atmosphere, from the attitude of the smiling, well-dressed saleswoman. She listens to the purring, persuasive tones of the attendant, and though sometimes the secret heart she scores this fawning, and howling to her wealth—she knows

'I've called,' he said briefly. 'I've turned my back and stood at the window trying to whistle.'

'Dick,' his father called.

The boy turned, the whistle flying on his lips, his eyes full of surprise. He knew how much his father wanted him to pass, yet there was no report in the voice; he was even smiling a little; his grip brought a rush of dumb gratitude to the boy's throat.

'Begin to make up! too late didn't you?' his father asked. The boy nodded.

'Well, it was a failure, of course whether it stays a failure or not depends upon what it has done for you. Failure is one of the commonest things in life—failure in a man's business, in his ambition, in his hopes, Jewett failed the other day—you know what his creditors are going to do!'

'No,' the boy answered eagerly.

'Set him up again. It was a magnificent failure—conditions he couldn't hold out against without dishonesty, so he let everything else go and kept his honor; and his creditors are going to help him on his feet because they believe in him. Now, Dick, I believe in my boy, and I am going to let him decide for himself. If I find you a position, or—you can take the year over and try it again. That would be tough I know—perhaps too tough for you. I shall not say a word if you choose business.'

But the boy's head was up now, his eyes clear and determined, looking straight into his father's.

'I'm going to take it over,' he declared.

Lest We Forget.

You can't build up a town or influence trade or business by winning. Every citizen owes it to himself to never allow a discouraging word of his town to go unchallenged. Every one has it within his power to contribute to his town's prosperity. The trouble is we all forget our own responsibilities.

Patience—I suppose you will want to send me to a warmer climate when I'm a little better? Doctor—'Good response! My dear sir, not a bit of it. It's just what I'm trying to save you from.'

Dr. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, 15c. Sold by all druggists.

Taxless Town.

There is a community in France where not only are there no taxes, but the timbers on the communal lands are sufficient to grant each person a small annuity. This happy land is Montmarin, in the Midi. There are seven electors in the hamlet, so to avoid anything like rivalry the seven return themselves to the local council. Cutting down the trees and selling them is sufficient to provide a livelihood for those simple people, whose tastes are so modest that they may be termed by some uncivilized.

'Is your husband cross?' An irritable, fault-finding disposition is often due to a disordered stomach. A man with good digestion is nearly always good natured. A great many have been permanently cured of stomach trouble by taking Chamberlain's Tablets. For sale by all dealers.

Success, like water, needs a channel to flow in. That's why we've got to dig.

Minard's Liniment Lumberman's friend.

'I'm Thankful For You.'

This was the sweet consoling word that came to a woman struggling with fresh bereavement at Thanksgiving season. Instantly a well of thankfulness was unsealed in her heart. All was not over, then! There was still something left to live for. Someone yet leaned on her. Someone turned to her for help and strength and comfort. It set a whole new slant on things, and she was no longer a victim of her own misfortune.

Does this not give us a hint how to comfort the sorrowful. I don't want to be misunderstood and say that I am not a religious man.

'All I want on earth is just once more to hear him say, 'I need you.' That comfort, alas! was nevermore to be had, but time showed her a helpless worldful of people always saying it. It is the true soul-tonic. The solace of helping others is within the reach of every sufferer. Added to that is sometimes vouchsafed the reward hinted at in the beginning of this paragraph. Now and then someone will feel a warm throbs of thankful tears towards us, and say so. It pays a thousand times for the little we are able to do out of our weakness. It is a thousand times better than sitting by life's wayside and holding out pitiful hands for beggars' alms of condolence and sympathy. Nobody wants to have anybody thankful to him. But it is a high form of happiness to know that someone is thankful to us.—Congregationalist.

Exhausted Nerves

Sleepless Nights

Continually Grow Worse Until Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Restores Vigor and Strength.

Mrs. Campbell.

What misery to lie awake night after night, thinking of all sorts of things without being able to get the rest and sleep which is necessary to restore the nervous energy wasted in the tasks of the day.

This symptom of exhaustion is one of the surest indications of an exhausted nervous system. You must have either a brain doctor or Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food feeds the feeble, wasted nerves back to health and strength. In few days you obtain the natural, restful sleep which helps so materially in restoring vitality to the nerves and strength to the whole body.

Mrs. Sarah Campbell, 105 "Alma Street," St. Thomas, Ont., writes: "For months I was so bothered with nervousness that I could not sleep nights. There were other symptoms of exhausted nerves, but none caused so much misery as the sleeplessness. I continually grew worse."

"I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and it was long before I could get any sleep. In my nervous condition I had lost all my strength. I built up the nervous system, and enabled me to rest at last."
