American Tourist Bring New Money to Vancouver.

Vancouver is preparing for a very busy summer and improvements are being made to handle the increased tourist traffic. Before the end of the season, pavement will be completed so that there will be a hard-surfaced road all the way to Seattle, 165 miles, and most of the road is paved to Portland, 388 miles.

An announcement just made shows how the tourist traffic puts money into every line of business. There will be a new hotel of 300 rooms started at once in order to take care of the increasing number of travellers and this hotel will require an investment of considerably over $1,000,000. New boats, summer camps, etc., are also being added to the equipment for entertaining the visitors.

Angora Rebuilt May Become New Capital of Turkey.

Angora.—If Admiral Colby M. Chester and his American associates undertake to convert Angora into a modern capital on the lines of Washington, they probably will find sufficient work to occupy them for many years. Under the terms of the economic concessions recently granted to the Americans, Angora is to have broad streets, high buildings, wide public squares, parks and spacious railroad terminals, just like any modern American city. This will involve the demolition of the thousands of squat brick and mud buildings, the narrow, winding, dark streets and the inadequate sanitary system which have made Angora one of the most primitive cities in the world.

If Angora is rebuilt it may mean the abandonment of Constantinople as the capital of Turkey. Many Turks favor the retention of Angora as the seat of government because of its military and naval invulnerability. It is 315 miles southeast of Constantinople, free from attack by hostile armies or navies entering the Dardanelles. The Greek army essayed to reach Angora in 1921 with disastrous results. The surrounding country is conspicuous with few railroads or highways. One of the purposes of the new contracts let to the Americans is to bring Angora within easier reach of the Sea of Marmara, and the Black and Mediterranean Seas. The most imposing building in Angora, among an array of structures that would scarcely do credit to the most backward of American mining villages is the extravagantly-named Grand National Assembly. It is a dilapidated two-story affair that was once a club. Only constant repair has kept it from falling to pieces. Yet it was in this modest edifice that the new and greater Turkey was born and fostered. It was from this tiny citadel that the Kemalists held the whole world at bay last year. The membership of the assembly presents an extraordinary picture of turbaned heads, kalpaks, fetes, and European and Moslem dress. There are a large number of priests in the assembly, and their long flowing robes of black and their colorful turbans give a picturesque touch to the otherwise drab gathering of 300 or more deputies. Mustafa Kemal has given Angora much of its importance. He lived here many years and was the leading spirit in the foundation of the Nationalist movement which has reunited the Turks. He realizes that to keep up with the west, much of western civilization must be adopted. Education, to be for the good of the nation," says the Nationalist leader, "must be based upon the systems of the west. Above all, both men and women have got to be perfectly free. I do not want to thicken the yoke of the woman, nor have I any sympathy with the prevalent practice of Moslem women living in isolation. By this time next year every woman shall mix freely with men, and go about with her face unveiled."

Asparagus served with butter sauce makes an excellent Sunday morning breakfast dish. A light salad is desirable in a full course dinner. Serve crisp hearts of lettuce, chilled in water and shaken dry, with Russian dressing. Planked halibut is sometimes served in a gorder of mashed potatoes and garnished with slices of broiled bacon, tomato, lemon and parsley.

A Wistful Girl's Timid Smile

Fervent beauty, dainty grace and lissome figure stirred the pulse of a rich nobleman whose hirelings stole her away from her blind sister and took her to his midnight fete. A handsome young aristocrat lost his heart, avenged her with his sword, took her to safety. She met another—a leader of the People. He, too, loved her. The fatal duel in the midst of the gorgeous splendors of a regal orgy as thousands of the starving rabble clamored at the palace gates, the love of the young aristocrat for the country-bred Henriette, and the love she inspired in the heart of Danton, leader of the uprising against the French Monarchy—These things, each punctuated by a kiss, formed a chain of circumstances that quickened the seditious People into open and armed rebellion—that brought the Fall of the Bastille—the "Feast of Reason" when all Paris went mad—the "Dance of the Carmagnole" when woman led the wild revelry. Then came the Commune—the Reign of Terror—the Guillotine—the downfall of Danton, leader—the sentence of death—the reprieve—Peace! And so, all because of Love, a King was deposed, a great monarchy fell, a great republic came into being.
