"Sandra" Strikes at Human Appeal

Barbara La Marr Scores Hit in New Picture From Doles Novel.

An absorbing study in human nature is afforded motion picture audiences in "Sandra," the first of a series of productions starring Barbara La Marr, which opens at the Star Theatre to-night.

This picture, visualized from the novel by Pearl Doles Bell, strikes an intensely human note in the naturalness of the variety of characters which it presents.

The story is enacted in the main, by ten principal characters, all of them distinct personalities which will immediately be recognized as prototypes of the real thing by motion picture audiences.

The character of Sandra is invested with a dual personality—one woman content with commonplaces of home and domesticity; the other, a restless, diversion-seeking type who believes that happiness lies beyond the bend in the winding road.

Then, there is Mate Stanley, a girl of sixteen or seventeen, sweet wholesome, full of fun, and to whom the world contains no evil; and, Bobby, her brother, is a typical Tarkington boy, seventeen, at the age when he takes himself and his clothes very seriously; while their mother, Eve Stanley, is a contented, home-loving woman, colorless and conservative. Her husband, Peter Stanley, is of the roly-poly, self-satisfied type, conventional in the extreme, and who would view as a radical departure the changing of his brand of cigars.

Stephen Winslow is a man-about-town, suave and charming, immaculately dressed, and the direct antithesis of David, husband of "Sandra," who is a simple, sport-loving, outdoor man, intensely devoted to his wife, and whose idea of a good time is fishing.

Then, we have the Reverend William J. Hapgood, a serious-minded, sincere type of young minister, more interested in his work than he is in erecting a magnificent edifice as a tribute to his money-raising powers.

In "Sandra," a First National picture, these characters present a drama from the page of life, moving about and always acting as human beings and not puppets of the screen.

"The Unknown Purple"

Famous Play Is Another Special Which Is Featured At The Majestic To-Night.

The story of the poor genius, an inventor who has discovered the secret of making the human body invisible, through the medium of a purple ray of light. But before he can enjoy the fruits of his labors he is betrayed by his wife, whom he dearly loves, and sent to prison for seven years to answer for the crime committed by her lover. It is in prison that he learns of this deception from a prisoner in the next cell, whom he has never been able even to see.

Peter Marchmont, when he is released from prison, through his genius, becomes a powerful but little-known figure in the financial world. It is then that he returns, unrecognized, to the home of his former wife and her husband, who were his betrayers. In possession of the secret of becoming invisible, through his purple ray of light, he begins the working out of a vengeance against them, which is weird and uncanny in its unfolding. He finally brings the man to the edge of financial and physical ruin, and has caused his former wife to become enamored of him without knowing who he really is. She agrees to desert her present husband, as she deserted him, and it is then that Peter Marchmont plans the thrilling climax which brings his vengeance and the play to its end.

A truly exceptional cast of players appear in "The Unknown Purple," headed by Henry B. Walthall, Alice Lake and Stuart Holmes. In support are Helen Ferguson, Ethel Grey Terry, Brimsley Shaw, James Morrison, Richard Wayne, Little Frankie Lee, Johnny Arthur and Mike Donlin.

A LETTER THAT BROUGHT THE SUN OUT.

Sometimes one sees so much discontent that one wonders if there is such a thing as happiness in the world. Sometimes one sees so much ingratitude that one wonders if there is such a thing as gratitude in the world. And sometimes one sees so much of sacrifice made in a spirit of bitterness and bringing a poor return that one wonders if sacrifice is really worthwhile after all.

And then, if one is oh very lucky, one receives a letter like the following, and one feels as if the sun had come out again in one's heart and knows there are beautiful things in the world such as happiness and gratitude and appreciation, and sacrifice that brings its own reward.

The Letter.

"I was very much interested in your talk the other day about 'next parents.' I have the honor of being one. I am the oldest of ten children, our father is a farmer, honest, hard-working and God-fearing. Some years our small farm yields grudgingly; some of the boys and one of the girls are still school. My slender salary furnishes means for the largest part of the family's 'white hyacinths,' and for some of the 'bread and butter.' I give it gladly. I love to pay for Toadie's music lessons and the twins basketball suits. It is a privilege to buy pretty dresses, and tulip bulbs, and hats, and toothbrushes, and school books for the nicest family in the world. I do not wait for my reward. I have it now. I am 'Sis' in whom they confide and of whom they beg and borrow, to whom they come alike with woes and pleasures, and I help them with their lessons, tell them whether to wear the blue or the brown, select gifts for their best girls, tie up their sore fingers, scold them on occasion, and love them always.
