The Opening of the Grand To-night.
The Grand Opera House season opens tonight with the great and only Herrmann and his clever wife, as the entertainers.
The principal part of Herrmann's entertainment consists of rare and all-startling phenomena to which his own original and collective brain has given evistence. His work seemingly sets at naught all natural laws. It is replete with mysticism and those occult deeds ordinarily ascribed to the redoubtable Prince of Darkness. Yet everything is simply done, and Herrmann frankly disclaims any supernatural agencies.

frankly disclaims any supernatural agencies.

The feats of legerdemain performed by Herrmann, are none of the ordinary slight-finance affairs to which the old line of theater-goers are accustomed. He is simply a marvel beyond the comprehension of the ordinary mortal, and is one of those instances of where it is necessary to see in order to believe. His performance is a succession of surprises, each succeeding one being more bewildering than its predecessor. He doesn't stoop to any of the old tricks that have for years been the stock in trade of the peripatetic magician, but entertains and amuses you with phenomena which baffle the most skillful and scientific to explain. This weird stage worker should be seen even by people who never go out to the theater, because his performance is something that will set one thinking about the mysterious forces around vs.
