"The Bicycle Girl," which will have its first production at the Grand on Monday is described as a cycle-comedy, a satire on the bicycling craze, and new woman insanity, and is said to be full of fun, song and dance. The farce is in three acts. The first shows Bicycle Club, with Grace Fordyce, the bicycle girl, as president. She is the orphaned daughter of a rich bicycle manufacturer, who has left her his entire fortune. She is an up-todate gin, a speculator in Wall street, and founder of the bicycle club. Grace is wooed by two suitors; one is Baron Byke, an American who masquerades as a French noblemean. Byke's father and Grace's were rival bicycle makers. Byke thinks by wedding Grace that the two firms can be consolidated. The other suitor is a student, who resolves to win the affections of Grace. The second act shows a genuine clam-bake of the club. In this act the kinetoscope is introduced for the first time on the stage. The third and last act shows
