WANT AD TIPS

A Market For Used and Off-Grade Goods

Between perfect condition and a state of no utility whatever, there is a wide gap. Think of nearly any article. Most stores sell it only in Number One Shape, yet it has value all along the line, as it deteriorates under use, until it is junked. And the junkman gets value out of it, even then!

If there is value in a thing, the fact that it is not new, not Number One, does not necessarily militate against its sale. This newspaper has hosts of readers of the Want Ad section, who are in the market for just such bargains. That is the right word-bargains. Keen buyers know that the purchaser of many new articles, from automobiles and washing machines to dwelling houses, pays a substantial premium for the new condition. The moment the article passes into the buyer's possession there is an immediate and heavy drop in sales value.

And when the same thing is sold, used condition, it is possible in most cases to get it at a bargain, value considered. The foregoing points the way to successful Want Ad methods with used and off-grade goods. Don't describe the goods in your Want Ad as better than they are-that will only mean disappointment when over-hopeful inquirers call. Describe the goods accurately.

Then indicate their usefulness. And, finally, suggest the big opportunity to save.

An orchardist, who has many windfall apples every year works along these lines, bringing in many an extra dollar for apples there is no market for in regular trade channels. He advertises, "Fine, big, windfall apples, just the thing for apple jelly, butter, eider. Pick them up yourself; 25c a bushel."

The well-worded Want Ad quickly sells used or off-grade articles.
