

The Register Enlarged.

With the present issue the Register presents its readers considerably enlarged in form. The quantity of material has been increased by fully one-fourth. But for late news we would not claim any particular credit. However, if we find ourselves able to continue the eight-page "large sheet" it will not be at any sacrifice of quality. The Register has aimed all along at original and independent discussion of the topics of the day. Nor have we been at all discouraged by lack of appreciation on the part of the Catholic people of Canada. It will be our desire in the future, as in the past, to present on every page of this journal articles unbiassed by partisanship, though of course not less open to criticism. As between ourselves and our readers, there can be no great grounds for complaint, if on one side independence of statement is granted and on the other every opportunity afforded for criticism, both parties being guided by the same principle that nothing unworthy of Catholic journalism be set down or advanced.

Mr. St. George Mivart and Pope Leo.

Catholic England had a sensation last week in the form of an attack upon Pope Leo by a gentleman who has passed for one of the leading and most enlightened Catholic laymen in the United Kingdom. Our readers know the reputation of Dr. St. George Mivart. His works are held in esteem among them, and his spirit as a writer is not to be doubted. He is a man of high intellect, and his articles are accordingly on the moment placed upon the Index, and are themselves published and immediately read by himself in obedience to the Pope's commands. This is the same polemic as the London Times upon the Pope. He was inspired to this extraordinary action, he says, because Pope Leo did not speak out in favor of Captain Dreyfus during the recent trial at Rennes. We have heard of many cases of men made an object of censure from the misfortunes of the army, but Dr. Mivart is certainly the most peculiar outbreak on record so far. Here is his own description of his state of mind: "I have heard apostolical say that Pope Leo was silent because he did not wish to offend the Emperor. True indeed, in the saying 'Save me from my friends.' Offend France's God's voice to refrain from telling me what their duty is for fear of consequences? As if God could not be treated with the consequences of any such done in fulfillment of His behests! Such a fellow is almost without precedent, yet there has been on almost as great a refusal to the condemnation of Galileo. There also, an appalling blunder was made and one of the greatest of opportunities thrown away. Then the Pope and Cardinals omitted an authoritative statement on the subject in the Nineteenth Century for July, 1885. We not only failed to regard the interpretation of Scripture, which everyone supposed to be their province, but we rendered futile any such future Scriptural doctee. At that time the Pope and Cardinals missed the world with respect to belief, with the result that, one by one, millions of Catholics have since abandoned their religious belief. Dreyfus is the God of the nineteenth century, and the world with respect to morals, and the probable result that other millions of Catholics will one by one abandon Catholicity. The seal has been prodigious. No trial of any other kind has had such world-wide consequences since that of Christ, Jesus, Christ, by His proclamation of Himself as the Messiah and a King, and incurred condemnation by the Jewish and the Roman law. But Dreyfus had incurred no condemnation, save what was. It is curious that the heads of the Catholic body have not been more sympathetic with the Allean law. We hear much of the necessity and natural love of Jesus for His mother, can He be thought desirous of seeing for the sake of His own blood—the tribe and nation?" Dr. Mivart's anxiety must be terrible. He does not attempt to disguise his extreme partisan feeling against Dreyfus. Sentient people, no doubt, have all up the time been by this the part of the same Dreyfus. In past all influence of Catholicism. Of course there have been a few exceptions to prove the rule. Sentient newspaper correspondents and even Protestant clergymen—
